The Seventy Scene, a new beginning; not just the beginning of a new decade but of an exciting age symbolized by bold ventures, independent thinking, and a conscious effort to understand one another. The voices of the Fifth Dimension told us this is the dawning of the Age of Aquarius . . . certainly a new age in history and science . . . all the world held its breath as it watched that giant step for mankind taken on the surface of the moon . . . Paris peace talks and draft legislation are signs of changes that effect the homes of all high school students . . . The Seventy Scene—let's get a closer look at it . . .

THE YEAR BEGAN WITH the same first two-weeks confusion caused by computer mistakes, course changes, and the yearly ton of mimeographed forms and notices. There was also the human effort involved in remembering what day was what after enjoying a summer when it made no difference. But by the time things began to shape up for most of us, we'd already run into some real shockers.

Provisions had been made for students to legally go to lockers instead of sneaking between classes. Labs were all scheduled, but no more 210—it had been made into a journalism office. Upperclassmen now had one advantage over the rest of the school. They didn't have to take orientation, but the new air-conditioned study hall in 200 was open to them just the same. Extremes in appearance were still strictly forbidden but even teachers had begun sporting fashionable lengths in skirts and sideburns. Somehow the office lost a little of its gas chamber image . . .

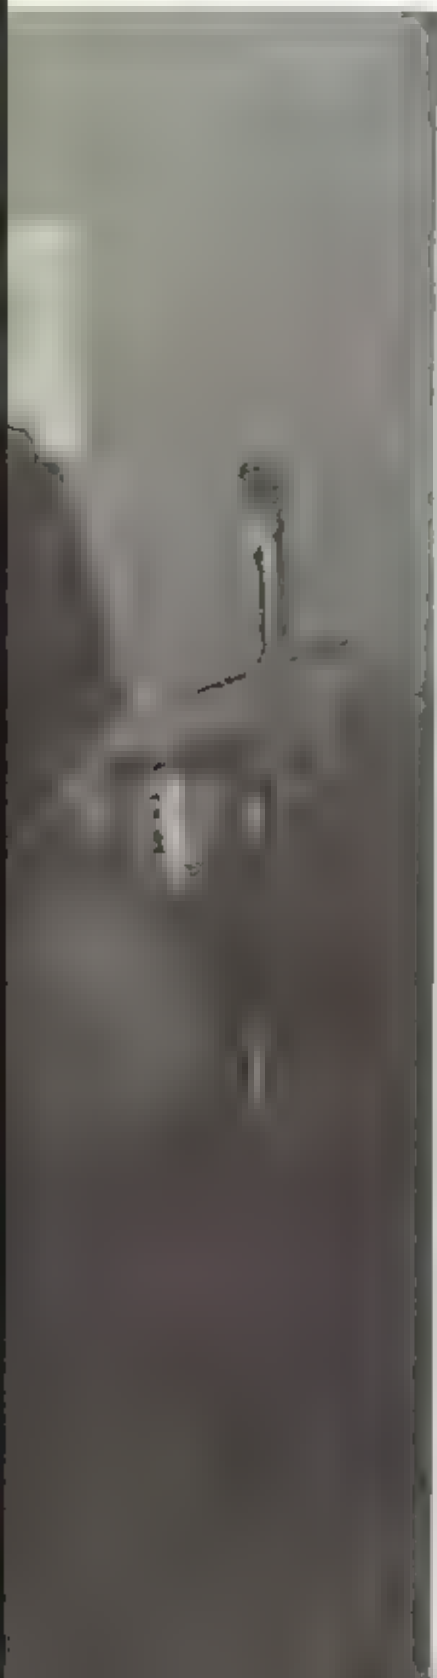

AMAZING THINGS BEGAN TO HAPPEN

--even the rebirth of real school spirit. Not a game went by without Lewis players having to wade through the decorations to get to their lockers. Every Friday the inside of the building seemed to be wearing its own special uniform in blue and white paper and streamers. Students even staged their own pep assemblies before school to replace those denied during school time.

And the band! Remember wondering if we had one? Seventy saw an end to that, you'd better believe it. Sounds of "You Can Take Salem Out of the Country" from the opposition were drowned out by "I'm Salem Born" done in blaring brass and gusting voices. Games again became a place where pride in the players didn't have to hide under the seats.

After the home games the SPORTS FOUNDATION AND SALEM MOTORS encouraged former Lendy's frequenters to bop on over to the hop.

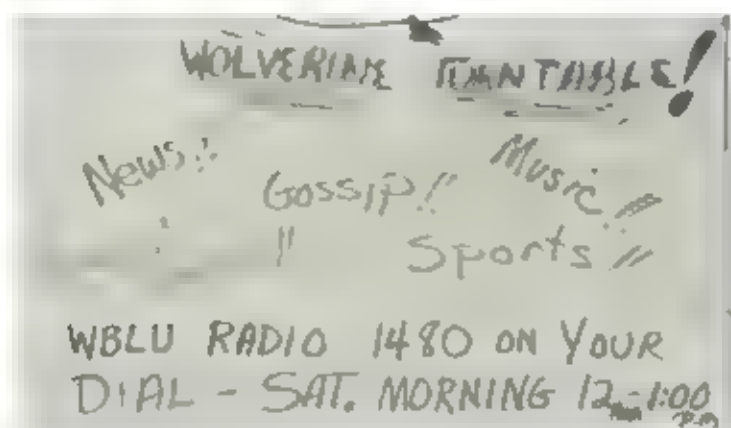

SCHOOL SPIRIT WAS NOT LIMITED TO SPORTS

A different kind of school spirit arose; the stuff that moves a student to speak out for changes he thinks should be made rather than sit back in apathy. There was a response to the need for changes. A noticeable change in the school paper and radio program was seen as this spirit grew in scope. Of course some ideas and opinions were more responsible than others, but regardless—something was there that had been dead for quite awhile—the will to do something. Students cut loose and realized that the more they put into Andrew Lewis the more they would get from it. All seemed to be spontaneous.

In the jungle that is the chemistry laboratory, amidst the test tubes, beakers, and graduated cylinders, there lurks a unique scientific mentor. She is of a friendly sort and is easily recognized by her large, round glasses rimmed with tortoise-shell. As sincere as she is capable, this chemistry scholar is always available to all who seek her assistance. Her lab stockroom is well-equipped with chemicals, appropriate paraphernalia, and all apparatus necessary for the preparing of a good cup of coffee to lighten the day's load. An ardent football fan, she is never too busy to discuss, play by play, high school and pro games with classroom gridiron stars.

Engaged in incessant debate with the physics instructor as to the importance of chemistry in a world of science, she frequently gives vent to her humor and teasing nature. This staunch Republican, ever on the go, is opinionated and not afraid to stand up for and defend her beliefs. Her life is ordered and full. All who know her benefit from her wisdom and scientific genius. Philosopher as well as chemist, she is always ready to become familiar with the unknown and to attempt the impossible.

Because she has so unquestionably influenced our education and our lives for the better, it is with the greatest pride that we dedicate the 1970 PIONEER to Miss Frances Hurt.

DEDICATION

loaded with moments of expectation, hope, frustration, regret, joy, determination: Orientation Day, mass cafeteria cleanups at the end of the day, that first date, getting caught chewing gum, going from sentences to paragraphs to themes to research papers, college acceptances . . . or regrets, the Prom and afterwards. How did YOU make the scene?

The startling seventy scene opens up new worlds for the curious and the willing-to-try-anything-once student. One may try his hand at practical home mechanics while the other picks up the basic skills of interior decorating. Even the long-established English and math courses have a new look. The student may reveal a burning interest in world literature or take a deep breath and plunge into matrix algebra. Every turn leads him into new discoveries of life in the seventies

DISCOVERY

IMC BUSTLES WITH QUIET

The Andrew Lewis IMC was one of the greatest credits to our school this year. Almost 17,000 volumes flanked the walls covering every subject from A to Z. During the course of the year, approximately 1,000 books were added to the shelves. Once again Mrs. Counts and Mrs. Glenn stocked the Instructional Material Center with records, tapes, and microfilms that supplemented almost every course offered at Lewis. Students could come in on their gain time and review a record for Modern American Music, study a microfilm for biology, or listen to any of the many tapes of speeches for a history class.

Andrew Lewis was one of the few schools in the state to boast a brand new $1,400 copier. Students were able to copy famous art works, magazine articles, and whole sections of reference books with this copier. Writing themes became a little easier, and illustrations began to appear in research papers, thanks to this wonderful machine.

Any confident and intelligent student is somewhat awed at the sight of these hundreds of books

Mrs. Counts, our head librarian, carefully checks an order for filmstrips

Fall and winter saw the IMC in constant motion. The forty-four study carrels were occupied by as many as 1,500 students a day. When spring arrived, Seniors who had long been in hibernation in the cafeteria, deluged the IMC compiling materials for their senior themes

Run with efficiency, consistency, and meticulous care, the Andrew Lewis library was a source of great pride for the school. It operated on the scale of many small colleges, and truly provided the fortunate Lewis student a center for his academic industry.

SECOND FLOOR SCENE IS STOLEN BY THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

The second floor scene was stolen by one of the best English departments Lewis has known. The English Lab, colorfully decorated with blue flowers, overflowed with students on gain time and in scheduled labs. Paperbacks and comic books in lockers were replaced by books checked out of the English Lab's own library.

Change was an important word in the '70 English department. The eighth graders were still given an introduction to basic grammar and short stories. Freshman English, on the other hand, took on a new face. Teen problems were emphasized instead of the analyzed study of Great Expectations. Guest Speakers from the area newspapers gave students a news media approach to the literary world. Sophomores broke away from the traditional study of Silas Marner to spend more time on the other forms of literature. Paragraphs and other writing compositions were also stressed. The Juniors made detailed studies into American literature. Theme writing also made up a large part of the work. As the expected product of four years of concentrated English composition, mature Seniors were ready to tackle research papers. After days of typing, erasing, and last minute footnotes, Senior themes were completed. "Beowulf" and "Paradise Lost" were briefly studied so that more time could be spent on the psychology of human nature and in-depth character analysis. This was provided by English 12 teachers to give students a basis for a critical study of the literature they will encounter after graduation.

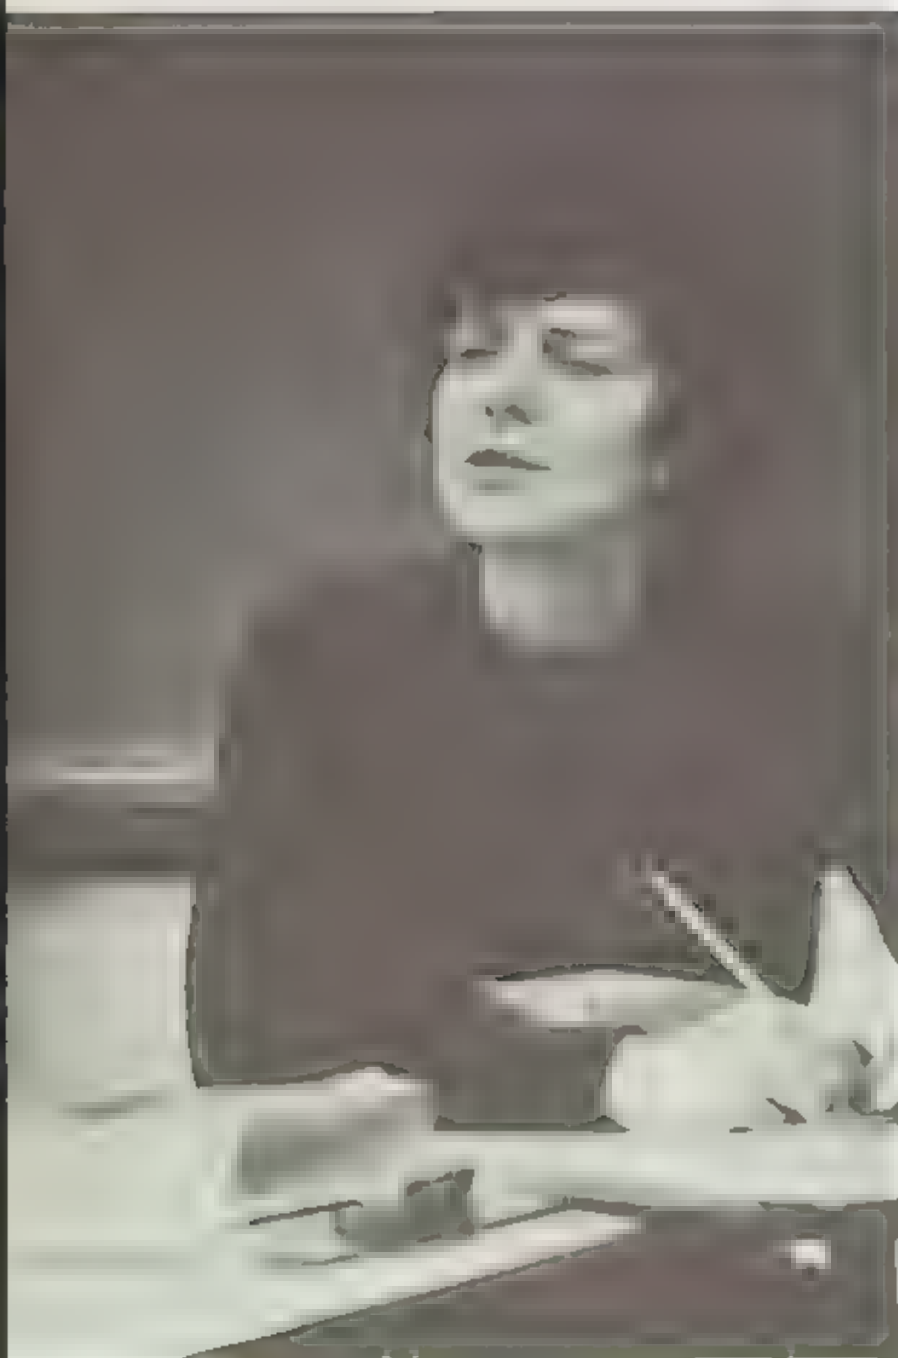

The electives offered by the English department made a wide scope of interests available to the student body. For those students who enjoy reading, World Literature and The Novel were presented. Short work buffs enjoyed Short Story-Essay and Modern Poetry. Debate and Public Speaking were offered to those who felt that skilled speech was an advantage. Humanities was offered as an all-around interest course for upper classmen. This year the English department presented one of the most varied and interesting curriculums at Andrew Lewis.

SOCIAL STUDIES UNFOLDS DRAMA IN CURRENT EVENTS

The most important aim of the social studies department was to instill a basis for world understanding into the wondering minds of students. In world history, students traced the culture and development of major countries in our world of yesteryear and today. American history scholars studied in detail the United States from its very birth through wars, elections, scandals, and triumphs.

The government classes, along with all other social studies classes, were host to many feuds over consolidation of the Roanoke Valley and, of course, the 1969 gubernatorial election. The heated campaign was especially exciting and most educational for social studies students because it was highlighted by a visit from President Richard M. Nixon who spoke for candidate Lynwood Holton at the Civic Center.

Russian History and Eastern Civilization embarked on its second year as an elective at Andrew Lewis. Learning of the communism in foreign countries brought a greater appreciation of the democracy and freedom that we enjoy in our country.

Social studies students who thought the United States was complex tried to compare it with other major governments of the world in Comparative Government class, while in economics, students probed deep into the maddening world of business, industry, and finance trying to understand inflation.

Sociology and Psychology classes enabled students to study development and behavior of peoples and their environments. Such pertinent problems as population control were studied and possible solutions offered.

The students of social studies are learning of the world today so they can be better leaders for tomorrow. They look optimistically to the opportunities that the future holds.

HAPPY FACES HIDE BRAINS PACKED WITH THEOREMS AND RULES

"Hardworking, industrious, and eager to learn," is a good all 'round description of an Andrew Lewis math student. You say you don't believe me? Alright! So this is exaggerated a little, but they do try to learn—and many succeed! On the modular scheduling, with the relaxed air of labs and IA's, many students find that it is easier to speak up and to ask questions. They can become part of the class.

There are three courses at A.L. which were developed mainly for helping the student with everyday problems. These are, of course, Math 8, Math 9, and Math 12.

For the student who would like to delve deeper into math, there are many other courses offered. Algebra I, Algebra II, Advanced Algebra, and Trigonometry may fill the student with confusion at first glance. But as the students emerge from these "dreadful" courses with passing grades, you may see many happy faces. And behind the happy faces, you will find brains that are jampacked with principles and hypotheses that will never be forgotten.

Word problems such as, "If girl A left Catowba at 10:00 p.m. and girl B left at 12:00 a.m. and traveled twice as fast, when would B overtake A?" put a smile on Cheri Johnson's contemplative face.

Mrs. Dantzler, with the help of one of those "new tangled mechanical jobs", the overhead projector, receives close attention from her Algebra students.

BUSINESS

EVERYBODY AND HIS BOSS HAS TO START AT THE BOTTOM

The Andrew Lewis business department, which is one of the best in the state of Virginia, is busy preparing young moderns for their entrance into the ever-progressing world of business. In order to keep up with today's flourishing economy, our department has been equipped with all the necessities of a present-day business office.

General business is designed to give the student an idea about the basics of all phases of business life. Typing I and II, book keeping, shorthand, and office practices were brought in for the students who want to follow through each aspect on specific lines. There is also a course to satisfy a student's more personal needs in education and it is a bet that you can't guess the name of this course—personal typing!

FLUENT SPEAKING IS STRESSED BY THE LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

As the world grows increasingly smaller, there is a greater need for communication with people in other countries. In keeping with this idea, language continued to compose a sizeable portion of the academic curriculum at Lewis.

The language teachers continued the practice of using their languages in conversation and literature rather than in grammar lessons. Again this year, the labs were a great help to students in learning the pronunciation of difficult words. After mastering the basics, Latin students were led into Roman history by translating ancient works. French and Spanish students were often temporarily stripped of their English vernacular in I.A.'s. Their classes were designed to stress the thought and speech patterns of the language under fire. Coordinated outside activities provided a cultural background and a chance to use their new talents. Struggling German students found that learning German required diligent work, great concentration and the ability to gargle while speaking. This was the first year both German I and II were taught at Andrew Lewis.

Through foreign language study, students become familiar with another culture and way of life different from their own. There also is the hope that after this introduction, students will become fluent in more than just one language.

PRACTICAL ARTS

PRACTICAL ARTS ADAPT TO NEED FOR RELEVANCE IN SCHOOL

Courses in the Practical Arts have become among the most widely studied electives at Andrew Lewis. Many girls, nurturing their dreams of being the ideal wife and mother, developed their cooking and sewing skills in home ec. Quite a few girls who had already studied home economics learned dress design. Interior decorating students drew house plans, visited mobile homes and studied styles of furnishings.

Boys took to the drawing board in mechanical drawing. There they precisely drew such things as circles and arms, and eventually they put them together to make a machine. Power mechanics students worked on a single cylinder gasoline engine, correcting malfunctions and learning the operation of the Otto cycle.

Girls and boys enjoyed one class in the shop together. In Practical Home Mechanics toasters were broken down and repaired. Electric current was the subject of several lectures. Generally, Practical Home Mechanics students learned basic instructions for working with home appliances and in dealing with common household situations. The woodworking students built cabinets while other students worked with band metal and sheet metal.

The keen interest of the students, sparked by excellent teachers and facilities, made this one of the most successful years ever for the Practical Arts department at Andrew Lewis.

STUDENTS REACH NEW CULTURAL DIMENSIONS

Three new teachers graced the fine arts department this year in band, choir and art.

In the music department, both the band and the choir had new directors. Mr. Dan Reaser led the band, and Mr. William Snyder directed the choir to a very successful and fulfilling year. Students who preferred instruments could play in either the marching or concert bands, and those more vocally inclined were offered a choice of the eighth grade choir, ninth grade girl's choir, mixed choir, or chorale. Music theory and modern American music were taught to those interested in the different types of music and their background and composition.

The art department also had a new teacher this year as Mrs. Pamela Conner brought her talents to Lewis to aid Mr. Bullock in teaching perspective and form to students in the various art classes. Tentative artists were able to dabble in beginning painting and contemporary crafts, and those more advanced tried their hand at advanced painting, basic design, or commercial art. Work from the classes adorned Lewis' rooms and halls throughout the year.

The drama department was at its best again this year under the supervision of Miss Ann Thomason. Drama students gave excellent performances in the fall and spring, and the dramatists also participated in the drama festival in Martinsville with the play, "Images".

By participating in the fine arts, students were taught not only the skills involved in art, music, and drama, but a knowledge of the subjects, too, and they were offered an emotional outlet as well as an opportunity for self-expression.

P.E. CLASSES BEGIN YEAR WITH "COOL" ATTITUDE.

The year was full of surprises as the cold snap hit in September. It didn't bother anyone too much unless he or she had Phys. Ed. in the early morning with the birds singing, the sun shining, and the temperature reading fifty degrees. One might have looked out upon the class and seen twenty-five or thirty girls and fifty boys huddling outside, knees chattering. One might have gone back to class and heard about boys running to the Civic Center and back. And, going back outside, one might have heard yells and screams for joy because one team of young men didn't have to "skin it for football."

Well, winter came and went, and soon spring's slow pace seemed to rub against the wheels of time. No one really wanted to go back to class because, as they said, "It's too nice outside."

Driver's education was quite a different story. In the beginning of the 1969-1970 school year over 400 students were enrolled in the behind-the-book part of this course.

Mr. Miley reaches for a pen while emphasizing the importance of safe driving in a Driver's Ed. lecture.

And out of the Driver's Ed car one could imagine Mr. Miley praying that the long-haired student driver next to him wouldn't push the gas pedal to the floorboard and scream through the driving range.

In Recreational Safety class, the teachers, Coach Hubble and Coach Campbell, had the students write their own tests. In the Interact groups, students wrote questions pertaining to what had just been studied, and the best questions showed up on the tests. Also, the teachers had guest speakers come in to speak on such subjects as drag racing, Rescue Squads, and other intriguing subjects.

Girls had fun running down the halls with gym suits on, trying desperately not to draw attention to themselves. They played volleyball, exercised, danced, sang and had a wonderful time. It seemed that Mrs. Farley, the new girl's gym teacher, made quite a hit with the girls. So you know that when the teachers and students have a great time, the class or classes must have some really fantastic teachers.

FUTURE SCIENTISTS GET BACKGROUND IN VARIETY OF AREAS

The science department, having adapted to the changes brought by modular scheduling, began its new year of strange odors, startling explosions, and new discoveries under the supervision of Miss Peggy Hurt. While budding eighth and ninth grade scientists enrolled in Earth Science and Science 9, upper classmen tackled courses such as Chemistry, Physics, and Space Science for extra knowledge as well as extra credits. Creative Horticulture enthusiasts were pleased to receive new equipment to boost their green-thumbery, and Anatomy students, overcome by the smell of dogfish, were more than happy to move on to a study of Genetics.

Many students, motivated by the promise of an extra "A", participated in a major activity of the year by entering carefully developed projects in the annual science fair.

With the aid of competent teachers and faithful lab assistants, Liza Highfill, Suzanne Hoback, and Wayne Agee, ambitious students were not only able to get necessary background for college studies, but also to get a taste of several "interest" areas of the field of science.

Excitement—stimulation, agitation, stir—in short, athletics. The thrill of a game-winning touchdown as the Wolverines come from behind to win a big football game; a bad score as the Lewis cagers hold off a last-ditch rally by a desperate opponent to save a vital basketball contest; the tenseness of the bottom of the ninth in a baseball clash, two outs, the bases loaded, and the Big Blue in need of one more run; this was excitement as all Wolverines knew it, with all the thrills, chills, exultations, and heartbreaks ever-existent in the world of sports.

Head coach Eddie Joyce reflects concern for upcoming Beckley game

The 1969 edition of the Andrew Lewis Wolverines sported a new look, two-platoon, for head coach Eddie Joyce decided this was the year for the Wolverines to go with separate offensive and defensive units. The result was a relatively young team lacking in experience in some positions, but one which compiled a fine 8-2 record, and missed out on the district title by just a few points.

The Wolverines went to camp with high hopes and a lot of spirit. After three weeks of tough preseason practice, the Wolves traveled to Martinsville for their first regular season game with the Bulldogs. Trailing at half 3-0, the Wolverines regained their winning form and came back to beat Martinsville by a score of 26-3.

Next for the Wolves was 1968 state champion George Washington of Danville. Down 12-9 with minutes remaining, the Wolverine offense drove 95 yards for the game winning touchdown, and the Lewis team took a decisive game from the proud Cardinals.

Playing in the rain and mud, the Wolverines dominated outclassed Roanoke Catholic, winning by a score of 50-23. The only questions concerning this game were how bad the score would be and how much time the reserves would play.

Jefferson came to Salem hoping to make it two upset wins in a row over Lewis. And that they did, edging the Wolverines 22-19 in a bitterly contested game. All hopes for a state championship for Lewis vanished, but the district crown remained.

Coming back strong after their first loss, the Wolverines exploded for a 37-0 victory over Patrick Henry. Experiencing trouble at first from the stubborn Patriots, the Wolverines finally got rolling and went on to demolish their arch-rivals.

Logan, West Virginia, rated number seven in their state at the time, were sorry they paid a visit to Municipal Field. Looking sluggish in the first half, the Lewismen straightened things out as they romped to a 35-8 win over the classy Wildcats.

In one of the more important games of the year, Andrew Lewis went to Victory Stadium to play previously unbeaten William Fleming. In control throughout the game, the Wolverines won this big one 14-0, shutting out the powerful Fleming offense.

The Wolves then traveled to Beckley, West Virginia, to take on the Woodrow Wilson Flying Eagles. Falling behind early in the game, the Big Blue turned to their strong passing attack to come back and win 29-14.

Now Lewis was faced with the big game of the season, as Halifax County came to Salem to decide the Western District Championship. The Wolverines took a commanding 13-0 lead in the first half, but two quick Halifax scores made it 14-13. Lewis scored again, but the Comets came back to lead for good at 21-19 as the Wolverines dropped a heartbreaker and the district crown.

Playing out the season at Lynchburg against E.C. Glass, the Wolves had their troubles with their district rivals, finding it hard to move on the Hilltopper defense and having problems containing the Glass single-wing. In a sloppy game, Lewis came out on top 14-3 to complete the season.

In all fairness to all concerned, it must be said that the season is looked back upon with disappointment. The Wolverines looked forward to bringing home another state championship to Andrew Lewis, but that first loss to Jefferson erased those dreams. Even then there was the Western District title and a chance at the Western Regional; however, the Halifax Comets closed that issue. The breaks just did not go the way of the Wolverines, as the Big Blue dropped two extremely close games. But this excellent Lewis team had nothing to be ashamed of, for their fine eight and two record marked them one of the best, if not the best, teams around.

BEHIND THE SCENES: ACTION THE FANS DON'T SEE

The majority of the preparation for the '69 season was unpublicized. It started when next year's hopefuls began a weight program. Next came participation in the spring track program, more weightlifting in the summer, and in August, captains' and preseason practices. On the other hand, the two weeks of football camp were well publicized. Despite all the time put into practice, the 24 hours before the game were the most important. If the players were not mentally prepared for the game, eight months of work would be useless.

To get all of the Wolves emotionally ready for battle, the team attended church together. The jokes, smiles, and wisecracks heard in school and at the Civic Center during the pregame meal are all put aside after church. From then on it was the Bulldogs of Martinsville.

After church the team loaded the bus. A few players checked their assignments one last time. Others discussed techniques with more experienced boys, but most of the team either slept or just stared into space. Only the sound of the huge diesel engine and big tires of the bus could be heard.

Finally the bus rolled into the Martinsville parking lot. In near silence, the boys carried their gear to the locker room. Fifteen minutes later, the team assembled in a classroom, fully dressed except for shoulder pads and jerseys. Here the coaches checked each unit to make sure that each one had eleven men. After Coach Joyce finished his pep talk, all of the coaches left. Then, as everyone else finished dressing, captains Reid McClure and Charlie Hammersley led the "rap session". Here every member of the team had a chance to add an inspirational message. Following years of tradition, the session ended with one captain shouting "Let's go!" Immediately the classroom became a riot scene with each player fighting to get out and onto the field. Was the team mentally ready? The abandoned room looked like it had been hit by a tornado. Forty-four screaming Wolverines made more noise than all of Martinsville. You're darned right, the Wolves were ready that night!!!

The Lewis Junior Varsity football squad carried on the Wolverine tradition of going undefeated in five games. The young Wolves opened the season with an impressive 12-0 shut-out win over Northside. Traveling to Lynchburg, the team handily defeated their E.C. Glass counterparts 28 to 14. In an important game against a big Jefferson team, the baby Wolverines came from behind in the last quarter to defeat the stubborn Magicians by a score of 12 to 8. Another victory was added to the win column when Patrick Henry forfeited due to a lack of jayvee players, so the Wolverines took a perfect record into the game of the season with unbeaten William Fleming. Both teams remained undefeated as the Wolverines and the Colonels fought to a 6-6 tie in a game in which mistakes may have cost Lewis a victory. The co-city-county champions closed out the season in fine form by routing Glenvar to the tune of 42 to 0.

The success of the Jayvees was even more impressive if one takes into account the little team practice they had while preparing the Varsity for their Friday night games. It was remarkable that the younger Wolves executed as well as they did, and it was a real credit to them that they were able to get up for games. The devotion, dedication, and spirit of the team, along with the excellent record, are to be greatly commended; the effort is typical of the Wolverine tradition.

VICTORIES, NOT SPIRIT, EVADE LEWIS CAGERS

The season of the varsity basketball Wolverines must be considered a disappointment. Starting out pre-season practice with enthusiasm and high hopes, the year terminated with the Wolverines winning only their last game against Highland Springs. Playing good ball in many of their games, the Lewis men had the misfortune to suffer loss after loss in the final minutes of play. Erratic was the word to describe the cagers; they looked like a million dollars one moment and like a plugged nickel the next. But the basketball team was far better than its 1-18 record indicated, and although no consolation, they can be truthfully called the best 1-18 team in the state.

CLOSE CONTESTS AND LAST MINUTE LOSSES BAFFLE WOLVERINES

Coach Dick Miley started the season with an inexperienced team but one anxious to learn and play. Lettermen seniors Charley Hammersley, Jeff Highfill, and Sam McCoy formed a nucleus around which to rebuild, while Charlie Givens and Bob Tate, along with juniors Terry Murphy, Gary Fisher, and Steve Smith were expected to fill in the vacated positions. Jim Wilson, Ronnie Hannah, and Tommy Webster worked their more experienced teammates hard in practice, and also lent a hand in leadership and support. Playing most of their early season opponents close, the Wolverines almost pulled off the upset of the year when they narrowly lost to state power Jefferson. Time after time the Lewis men fell short of victory, only to come back fighting the next time. But Lady Luck proved stingy, as a win continued to elude the Wolverine cagers.

LADY LUCK GIVES THE WOLVERINE CAGERS THE COLD SHOULDER

In hopes of bolstering the Lewis attack, Coach Miley brought up freshman Eddie Joyce from the jayvees. Letterman junior Roger Surber rejoined the squad for the second semester and the Wolverine's situation was expected to improve. Characters changed but the plot was the same as victory managed to slip out of the Wolverine's grasp again and again. Finally their efforts were rewarded as Lewis beat Highland Springs in the last game in the Wolverine gym. Playing powerful Jefferson for the third time, the Big Blue gave the Magicians all they could handle in the Western District tournament before bowing out 51-45, ending the season. A disappointing winter, but one not to be forgotten.

JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL

JV'S POST WINNING 11-3 RECORD AND CAPTURE CHAMPIONSHIP

The J.V. basketball team racked up an impressive 11-3 record on it's way to the District Jayvee Championship. Under the auspices of Coach Charles Campbell, the junior Wolverines found out what it took to be champions: pride, desire, discipline, and a lot of ability. The young Lewismen played an extremely effective type of ball with hustling defense, tough rebounding, fine shooting, and all-around team play. Other than its attitude and desire to win, perhaps the greatest asset to the team was its tremendous depth: the young wolves were blessed with many able bodies. Someone was always ready to do the job, that job being to triumph over all. This well coached team of championship material is certain to brighten the basketball scene at Andrew Lewis.

BASEBALL, LONG UNKNOWN, FEELS A NEW SURGE FORWARD

The Andrew Lewis baseball team of 1969 experienced a somewhat frustrating season, struggling to a 3-9 record while playing tough Western District opponents. Under the guidance of coaches Dick Miley and David Price, the Wolverines worked hard in anticipation of a successful season and a possible district championship. Playing a lot of different players at a lot of different positions, the coaches sought to find the right combination to produce a winner. The end result was a team not particularly strong in the hitting department, but potentially as good defensively as any team in the area. Among the highlights of the season were the two wins over Jefferson and a no hit shutout victory over Halifax. However, the season could be considered somewhat of a disappointment taking into account the work and ability of the team, but experience will certainly provide for the future; Lewis baseball is up and coming.

TRACK

LACK OF EXPERIENCE AND DEPTH LIMITS LEWIS TRACK TEAM

The Wolverine track team of 1969 was one of limited ability but unlimited desire. With only about fifteen to twenty team members to work with, most of them young and inexperienced Coach Wallace Thompson led his team through the tough Western District competition. Despite the rough 0-6 regular season record, the striders finished sixth in the Cosmopolitan meet with some strong individual performances, and a week later duplicated that feat with a sixth place finish at the Western District meet at Roanoke College. Practice and patience from the 1969 season should greatly improve the quality of track at Lewis in the years to come, and the Wolverines can be expected to be strong contenders in the future

CROSS-COUNTRY MAKES SUCCESSFUL RETURN TO ANDREW LEWIS SPORTS

A well-balanced group of dedicated young runners emerged to spur the Andrew Lewis Cross-Country Team to a successful season after a year-long lay-off from competition. In the first meet of the season, the Lewismen were edged 27-29 (low score wins) by Patrick Henry, as one Lewis runner took a wrong turn on the Patriot course. In a tri-meet with Jefferson and Halifax county, the Lewis harriers out-distanced the Magicians 25-30, but succumbed 21-37 to the strong Comet team from Halifax. Next Lewis visited E.C. Glass and returned with an impressive 20-30 victory over the Hilltopper harriers. Mary Bethune of South Boston came to Salem and emerged as 20-39 victors. The following week, the Wolverines took the first thirteen places while trouncing Christiansburg by a score of 15-55. In the last regular season meet the Lewismen handily defeated rival William Fleming 21-40. The Lewis harriers completed their 1969 Cross Country season by finishing third behind Patrick Henry and Halifax in the district.

Jimmy Wells, Lewis Regional Champion, is declared victor in the assembly match with Jefferson

The Andrew Lewis wrestling team, under the guidance of first-year coach Bill Winters, carried the Wolverine pride and spirit to the mats during the winter months. Co-captains Leon Burcum and Jimmy Wells led the grapplers through the rugged season of rough practices, low-calorie dieting, and tough opposition. Super sophomore Cornelius Perry won all of his matches in the 98 pound weight class, as the Wolverines posted a disappointing 3-7-1 record against district opponents. In the Western Regional meet at Bristol, the Lewis men finished seventh out of a field of thirteen teams. Co-captain Wells won his 115 pound division, and Perry captured third place in his class. The Wolverine grapplers are to be commended for their long hours of hard work on the mats in this grueling and demanding sport.

The Wolverines opened the season with a 31-16 loss to Jefferson on the Magician's mats. Coming from behind to win on a late pin, the Lewis men overtook the Felming Colonels 23-19. Putting on a good show before the student body, the men in blue avenged their earlier loss to Jefferson, polishing off their rivals 31-19. A 34-14 loss to Patrick Henry was followed by a 34-16 trouncing of E.C. Glass. Traveling to Danville, the Wolverines were rudely welcomed by a 30-12 defeat at the hands of George Washington. Another late pin in the unlimited weight class enabled Lewis to tie Patrick Henry, but a 37-15 loss to Martinsville started the Wolverines on a losing streak. Another loss to George Washington's Cardinals and 75-15 defeat handed down by Martinsville finished the district schedule.

That rookie V.C. squad was destined to go wild with imagination and new spirit ideas. Two weeks after school was out they were trying to teach those arms and legs to go together. Though every muscle ached, these devoted cheerleaders bravely crammed their luggage into a Corvair and V.W. and headed for cheerleading camp. These ten "Hee-Haw'ers" learned seventeen new cheers and three pom pom routines in four days. Just because they were last to get to everything (except meals) didn't mean they'd place last in cheering competition. This inexperienced squad captured one blue ribbon and two red ones. Thursday afternoon came and ten sore gals sadly packed to leave. But their sadness didn't last long, as they were awarded a Spirit Stick for being the "Spunkiest Squad Around". The Varsity cheerleaders left camp bursting with ideas, honking their horns, and waving that Spirit Stick.

When September hit, the squad harnessed their energy and ideas to show the students what they'd been up to all summer. A giant football schedule went up in the cafeteria, and players were surprised to find their lockers decorated with goodies inside. Wrestlers and basketball players were "treated" too. The cheerleaders twinkled in their new hard-earned football uniforms as they exhibited their stunt cheer. Basketball season began with Basketball Week sponsored by the cheerleaders. A Pep band jazzed up the games, helping the squad rouse up that A.L. Spirit. Spring came all too soon, and the Senior cheerleaders reluctantly gave up their uniforms to the new squad at a cheerleading banquet.

Echoing the Varsity Squad at summer practices were the J.V. cheerleaders. When fall came they displayed their snappy cheers, donned in uniforms with new emblems and shaking their new pom poms. The J.V.'s helped the Varsity Squad cheer at Homecoming and often participated in pep assemblies. This J.V. squad has fond regards for their "Wooly Wolverine" and their "Horrays" but not for that certain cheerleader known for messing up the Hello cheer. Though all of their rides to away basketball games were last minute, they always cheered for the last tense seconds. Together these two cheerleading squads represented the pride, enthusiasm, and devotion for their school and YOUR school—THE GREAT ANDREW LEWIS!

GIRLS' TENNIS

SPRING HERALDED BY THE PATTER OF TENNIS BALLS

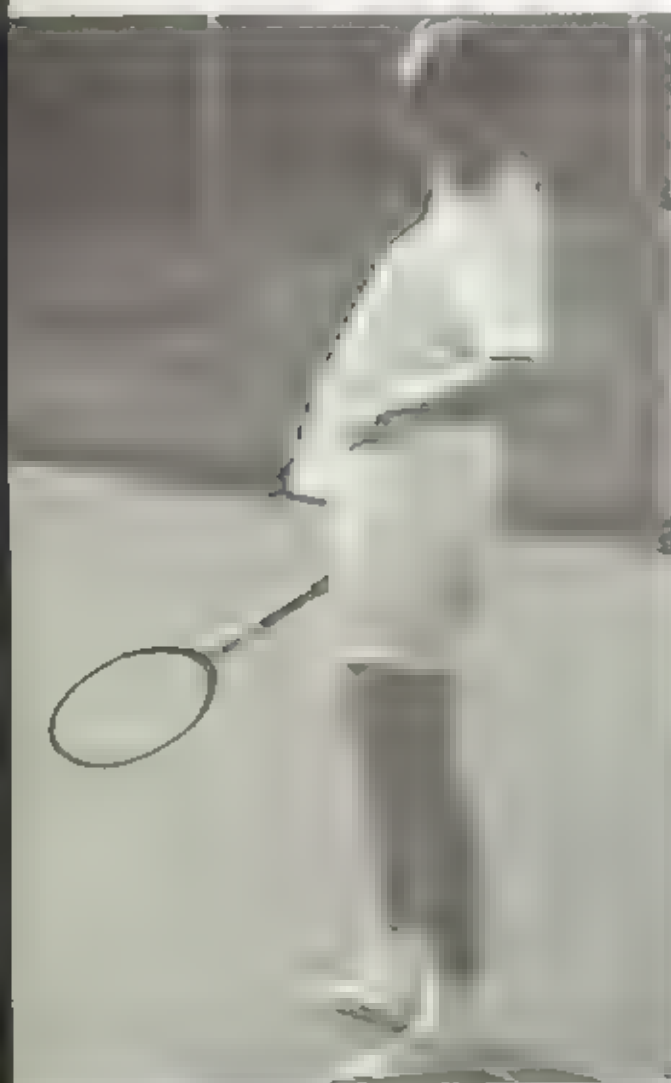

Last spring was heralded by the patter of tennis balls and the squeal of tenni-pumps. A handful of tennis enthusiasts showed up up at Oakey's Field to get in shape for the upcoming tournaments. The matches soon began, and the tension of competition rose

Look who the tennis team whipped—the Tennis Queens of Patrick Henry! They also beat Jefferson twice and Roanoke Catholic to end with a 4-2 record, and the state tournaments yet to come.

Liz Palmer, the Wolverine entry in the state competition, gallantly faced her opponent, eager to show those miscellaneous Virginians the tennis talent that Salem has produced. Her match was interrupted, however, by smoke billowing from the Hollins barn, which was blazing before anyone knew what had happened. Handicapped by a limited visibility and a lack of oxygen, Liz lost the match. The end of formal competition did not mean the end of the tennis season for these Wolverines, however; they continued to swing all summer long!

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

SOFTBALL TEAM SHINES FOR NEW COACH

The Girls' Softball team, having had another outstanding record of six wins against four close losses, came out second place in the city-county next to Addison. The team lost two heartbreakers to Addison, the first one by only one point, and the second one by two runs. The biggest and best achievement by the team, according to the coach, Mrs. McCoy, were two wins over Cave Spring. Success was the result of brilliant defensive plays and great hitting.

VOLLEYBALLERS SPIKE THEIR WAY TO VICTORY

The '69-'70 season marked the second year of existence for the girls' volleyball teams. The varsity group fared quite well. The team lost many close matches that could have gone either way. But the team, comprised of seven seniors and one sophomore, was very well balanced using such techniques as the "bump", "spike", "flick", and the "over-head" serve. The "over-head" serve proved to be quite vital to the teams' efforts. In most cases, it made the difference between a win or a loss.

The coach, Mrs. Nancy McCoy, felt that the team should have been undefeated. In one game, the team was down by ten points with one point needed by the opponents for game, but the Lewis girls kept fighting. They lost by only two points, for they wanted a win for Lewis.

The Junior Varsity team, also coached by Mrs. McCoy, didn't do quite as well. They lacked a certain something in their teamwork, but seemed to pull together at the end of the season. With many experienced players returning, the team looked forward to a promising season in Seventy

GYMNASTICS

NEW TRAMPOLINE KEEPS THINGS "JUMPING"

Hey, have you seen the girls in the old gym doing jack knives on the trampoline? . . . or dancing on a skinny beam? . . . or even swinging on parallel bars? Yes, Lewis' first organized gymnastics team is really out of sight. Though the team scuffled with the grappers for the use of the old gym, they did practice on Wednesday nights and Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Haddad bravely held her breath as each girl tried a new stunt. The new trampoline kept things "jumping", especially when the more advanced gymnasts would demonstrate graceful mid-air flips. Saturday, February 7, the new gymnastics team nervously headed for their first City-County Meet. Lisa Dearing followed the wrong team into the locker room, while Alexis Wreden forgot the middle of her routine. Despite these escapades by her fellow team mates, Pat McCormick managed to capture third place in all around competition: balance beam, parallel bars, vaulting and free exercise. On the following snowy Valentine's Day, Pat again placed in the balance beam competition of the Central and Western Regional Meet

GIRL TRACKERS TRUCK ON

Those track gals were rip-roaring, and ready to go come last April. After many hours of huffing and puffing and leg cramps they were ready for competition. The team's first meet was at the Baptist Children's Home. Pouring rain couldn't stop these cinderwomen, though at times it did make seeing a little rough. Donna Miller slushed away hugging a trophy won for her top performance in the 50 yard dash. Another track standout was Linda Altizer placing second for her 171' softball throw. Later on in April, the team entered the annual Patrick Henry track meet with nineteen other schools participating. Miss Miller placed second in the 50 yard dash this time and second in the 75 yard dash. Even though every girl didn't come home with a ribbon, she knew she had tried her "bestest" for the blue and white.

Track competition is seen not only in meets but also in the halls as any of these "trackers" may be recognized dashing down the corridor to be first in the cafeteria. Being on the track team comes in handy sometimes, doesn't it gals?

Practice makes perfect for Donna Miller, the only Wolverine cinderwoman named to the state track team.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAMS HAVE OUTSTANDING RECORDS

This year's Girls' Varsity Basketball Team was characterized by good teamwork, the desire to be number one, many outstanding players, and appreciation to their coach for five fine years she has given us. Five of the six starting players had been together for four years. There were a lot of excellent reserves, which means good teams in the future. On the bench, there was a sophomore who couldn't be stopped when she started driving in, another sophomore who swished twenty-foot shots and a freshman who stands six feet two inches tall

The team started out like it was number one and couldn't be beaten. It ran up a record of three wins and no losses until the week of the fourth game when the flu struck the team. Two starters, both guards, were sick in bed, and two forwards, both starters, were sick but showed up for the game. For the first time, the team went down in defeat. The next week the team faced tough Cave Spring. The Wolverettes played a terrific first half, and at the end of the first quarter the score was 10-3 in favor of Lewis. At the half, the Wolverettes were still in the lead. The second half the Wolverettes ran out of steam, and Cave Spring came out on top. This no one expected. The next week Lewis faced Northside, and in that game the Lewis girls hit the victory column again with a 43-29 win

The Junior-Varsity team also had a very good season. It had a good balanced scoring attack and a tough defense to try to penetrate

In their first game of the season, the "Andy-Lous" scored a victory over Byrd, only to have the game protested because of minor clock difficulty. The second game found the J.V.'s scoring an easy victory over Glenvar. They ran up a record of three wins and no losses until they were beaten by Northside. Then, North Cross beat them in a well-fought battle. They, too, were able to get back on the winning side with a well deserved win over Northside

Both teams should have an excellent season in '70-'71

Involvement played a very important part of the '70 scene, and to some less conscientious students it was perhaps the most rewarding segment of school life. Whether belonging to a club for fun, refreshments, and a yearbook picture, or to a staff for the hard work, headaches, and ironically enough, good times, the Andrew Lewis student had plenty of opportunities to find and do his "own thing"

INVOLVEMENT

WALDROP AND HIS WOMEN PULL SCA THROUGH PROBLEMS AND CRISES

Cooperation between the students and the faculty at school? Are you kidding? Well, believe it or not, an organization of students at Lewis trying to promote cooperation actually had a part in the Seventy Scene. These conspirators (known to friends as the SCA) got together whenever the need arose, in such well known spots as the auditorium and the gym. Their leaders (the Executive Council) huddled four times a week in headquarters (room 210) to deal with the minor problems and major crises that were exclusively theirs. Each member of the SCA crowd was kept on the jump, moving from one vice squad (committee) to another as they were set up. One major change in their make-up this year was the election of the Executive Council members from each class, not from the ranks of the House of Delegates as was the former practice.

The top man of this notorious gang was Steve Waldrop. He was surrounded by women: Ann Sutton, his trusty companion in cooperation, Lisa White, official recordkeeper and correspondent for the group, and Pat McCormack, the trigger "man" who kept strict watch over the moneybags. Of course it should not be forgotten that they were strongly influenced by the "old hands" who knew the tricks of the trade, Mrs. Price and Mrs. McClure.

Acting as intermediaries between two hostile camps were not the only duty of the SCA. Their second purpose was to bring about greater cooperation among the students themselves. Devious plots such as the magazine drive, exchange days, and senior participation day were designed to encourage students to work together. Social life was not ignored altogether; the SCA sponsored the annual hoedown (the Sweetheart Dance) in March.

The SCA, confronted on all sides with stubbornness and out and-out rebellion, came to know well the meaning of frustration. Limited in power and support, the Student Co-operative Association of Andrew Lewis could only try its best. It did Susan Hall and Tom Blanding attempt to keep their candles lit during the Betas' can delight Induction Ceremony.

The Beta Club has shown its versatility this year by being not only one of the most intellectual groups in the school, but also one of the most hard-working. One of their projects this year, painting the trash cans a bright blue and white, brightened the halls, and discouraged would-be litterbugs. ("Hey—I never knew we had trash cans in the hall.")

In November, the Betas matched wits with other groups on the local quiz shows, "What in the World" and "Who Knows". Later in the year, they appeared on "Classroom Kwiz" to challenge other area high-school students and to try for their third straight championship.

In March, the Lewis Beta Club met with other Beta Clubs throughout the state at Hotel Roanoke for their annual convention. Some of the activities included the Beta Ball, a talent show, business sessions, and campaigns for the election of state officers at the end of the weekend.

The Betas also continued their service of tutoring any students having difficulty with a "favorite" subject. It was helpful to the students to have their classmates tutor them in their subjects, and for once they could yell back at their "teachers" without getting sent to the office!

The year ended with the Induction Ceremony, as new members were brought into the Beta Club, and old members left with the satisfaction of a very busy and fulfilling year.

LEWIS BOYS "ALL KEYED UP" OVER SERVICE PROJECTS

On most Monday nights, the Key Club scene-stealers could be found working on service projects for the school and community. Early in the year, these boys joined the Kiwanis in the annual Peanut Drive, asking for donations to help deprived children in the Salem area. To insure the success of after-game hops, the members made posters to encourage the support of the student body. Much preparation and plain hard work by the Key Club made the Homecoming Dance one of the best ever. Of course, the members took a more active interest in this undertaking as the Prince of the festivities was none other than their own Key Club President Gary McCormack, and the King one of their noted members Reid McClure! At Christmas, this service club donated a record player and records to the children's ward of Roanoke Memorial Hospital, making a stay in the hospital a lot more bearable for area children.

The year's main highlight, as usual, was the state convention in Norfolk, where members had the chance to meet with other Key Clubs throughout the state, and discuss next-year plans. As a final project, the Key Club held an annual banquet and dance where the officers for 1970-71 were inducted.

Gary McCormack grins as he thinks of all the fun the Key Club always has at the convention.

CLUB HAS HOLIDAY SPIRIT YEAR-ROUND (HO-HO!)

The Keyettes had a hard time starting out this year (who wouldn't with nine members and a negative eighty-eight dollars in the treasury?), but after an extensive membership drive and several successful money-raising projects, these thirty jovial girls were once again "going straight". Their first project was to send monthly gifts to Mary Mongo, a child at the Lynchburg Training Center. About the same time, they organized a committee to clean the trophy case, restoring it to its rightful impressiveness. Soon it was November and time to start planning Project HOC (Helping Others at Christmas) with good hard work galore. The girls adopted a family and decorated their tree, played Santa Claus, shopped with their children, and bought the props for a traditional turkey dinner. The satisfaction gained by this project served to arouse their Christmas spirit and the fun of giving for the remaining five months of the year.

Spring always brings housecleaning, so the Keyettes went to work painting the teachers' lounge and washing black boards. The girls then raised money for the new Lewis-Gale Hospital and to help send members to the international convention in Washington D.C. The tradition year-end banquet was given by the Junior members in May, and, as always, was the perfect time to reminisce all the great times the Keyettes had had together in 1970.

GUEST SPEAKERS ARE TOPIC OF INTEREST FOR INTERACT MEMBERS

The walls of room 102 on most Wednesday nights resounded with the planning of projects, the experienced tones of guest speakers, and the inevitable sport of any group of boys: just "shooting the bull". Interact Club members took a field trip to a local doctor's home to see films on army training one week early in the school year. Another meeting became quite involved with the field of psychiatry, with members listening to tapes of speeches made by a renowned psychiatrist. At the most disagreeable time of the year, the club helped out the administration by taking tables to the gyms for exams. In order to let their sponsor club, the Rotary, get to know them, the Glenvar and Andrew Lewis Interact Clubs held a banquet at the Civic Center with the Rotary members as their guests. The Interact Club ended their part in the 70 Scene with an enthusiastic membership drive.

CLUB ENTHUSIASTICALLY INSPIRES SALEMITES TO DONATE BLOOD

The active Red Cross Club was guided during 1970 by their purpose to stimulate self-service and to develop better human relations within the school and community. To get into the swing of things, delegates from Andrew Lewis attended the Youth Leadership Development Center at Camp Easter Seal early in the year. At Christmas, the members, laden with cookies and songbooks, gave the annual party for patients at the Veteran's Administration. They also took favors to Snyder's Nursing Home, as they did during every major holiday. The long, cold winter was finally over and the club began hard work and preparation for the High School Blood Donor Drive, in which local schools competed for the highest number of pints donated. May brought an end to a year's work for most clubs, but Red Cross members were able to look forward to a whole summer doing volunteer work with mentally retarded children in nursing homes, or in area hospitals.

FCA USES RELIGION, ATHLETICS TO START A DECADE FOR THE BETTER

The FCA is made up of Christian athletes whose aim is to give an example of sportsmanship to the other students. Not only are they good sports, but they are also civic-minded. One of their projects was to encourage the Lewis homerooms to collect canned food for the Christmas baskets. These were collected at the Christmas assembly and given to Mr. Charlie Turner for distribution. These civic minded sportsmen also spent much of their own spare time at the basketball games selling soft drinks to refresh tired fans. However it wasn't all work for the FCA; they held several breakfasts and dinners. At these gatherings the members heard many guest speakers. From them the club learned much about helping in the community

The Monogram Club is the top goal for the athletes at Lewis. To gain membership one must letter in a varsity sport. If you think this is an easy task, ask one of the members of the Monogram Club. He will tell you that meeting the coaches' requirements for a letter isn't easy. Meetings are held in the boys' locker room whenever necessary. The club members' biggest pleasure and headache is the job of selecting the Homecoming Court. On top of this, they must choose the Queen and Princess from among the attractive girls in the Court. They also buy their flowers and arrange for convertibles for the girls to be presented in at the Homecoming game.

GAA PROMOTES INTEREST IN GIRLS' SPORTS

The Girls' Athletic Association kicked off its fourth big year with newly elected officers and members eagerly anticipating the coming year.

The main purpose of the GAA is to promote interest and participation in athletics among the girls at Andrew Lewis. The GAA sponsored many activities during the year for their members. A picnic was held at Mowles Spring Park in September. Besides having fun at the picnic, the new members got an opportunity to become better acquainted with the other members. Other activities held during the year included a scavenger hunt in the East Bottom vicinity, a fun night and pot luck supper, and a talent show. In December the special project of the GAA was caroling at the Mercy House.

The GAA also attempted to sponsor intramural volleyball games, but their efforts were useless. The girls did not give up on their first try to sponsor some type of intramural game because the basketball intramurals were very successful.

The year ended with an Awards Banquet. Deserving girls received pins, trophies and GAA blazers for their unselfish efforts to promote girls' sports.

PEP CLUB TRIES HARD TO INSTILL PEP INTO OTHER STUDENTS

Early in the fall, the Pep Club held its annual membership drive. Since the only requirement was a small membership fee, any student at Andrew Lewis was eligible to join. Having been successful, the drive was ended and the club had expanded considerably. As before, all cheerleaders were required to join and attend meetings regularly.

Starting off the year with a large program of activities ahead, committees were already being formed to plan and get ready for Homecoming. This included a parade, an assembly, and a float, along with selecting a King and a Prince to reign over the upcoming events.

Besides Homecoming, there were various other duties such as decorating the goalposts before football games, sponsoring buses for away games, and organizing a motorcade for the game against Fleming.

Satisfied with the outcome of their efforts to promote spirit and sportsmanship in students throughout the year, the Pep Club looks forward to another successful year.

HOMEMAKERS INVITE BOYS TO PARTICIPATE IN CLUB FASHION PRESENTATION

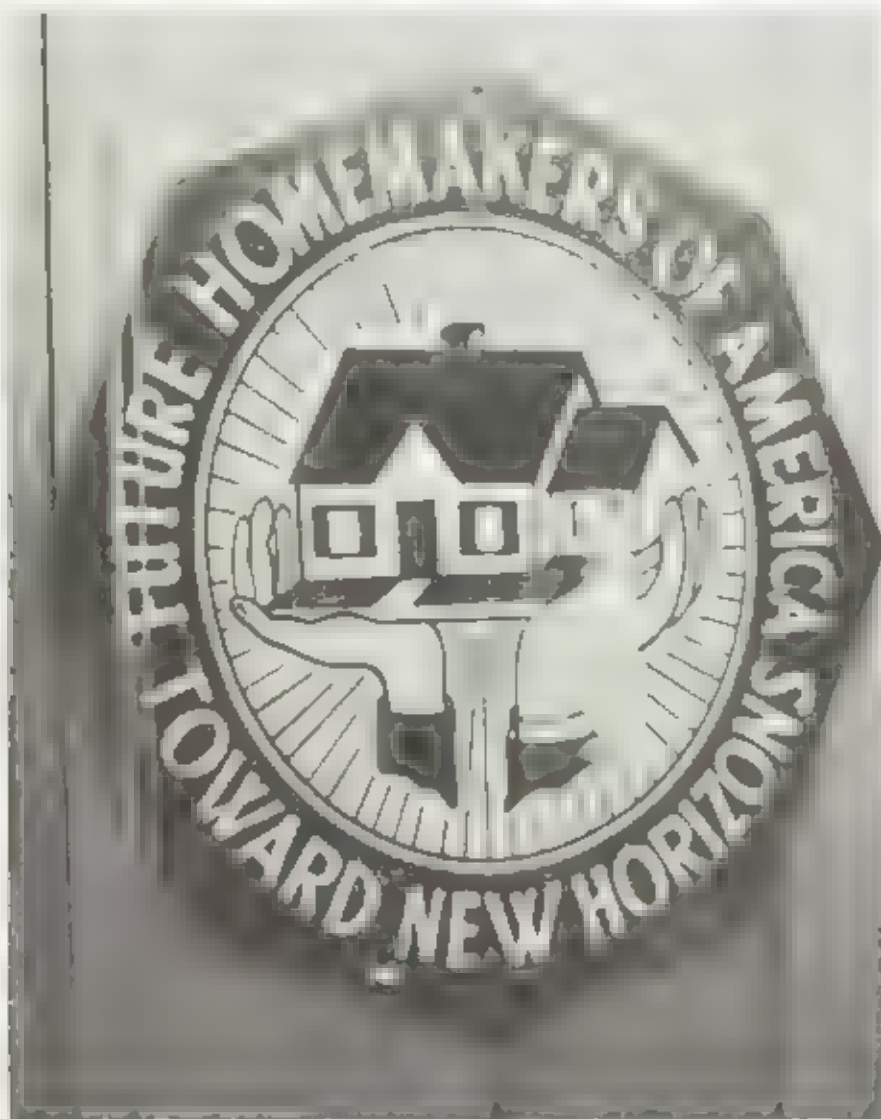

"Involvement" was the theme for the Future Homemakers of America this year. This involvement started with ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grade girls in the viewing of a "Men's Fashion Show" with the "latest fashions" displayed by several males from Lewis.

The club elected officers and then made plans for their Homecoming float. Taking advantage of the October 31st date, the F.H.S.'ers used witches, brooms, and hobgoblins to illustrate their theme "Who Cares If Halifax Goes to Pot?".

The Homemakers involved the community by taking a family under their wing and treating them to Thanksgiving dinner. At Christmas the girls entertained the old folks at the Mercy House with carols and refreshments.

The long winter months saw the girls set their sights for Spring with their traditional Fashion Show and their Mother-Daughter Tea. A prize was given for the best outfit in the Fashion Show and Degree Pins were awarded at the Mother-Daughter Tea.

The Future Homemakers of America will prove their worth in future years when the former FHA members will put their knowledge gained in Home Economics class to use as they make their own homes.

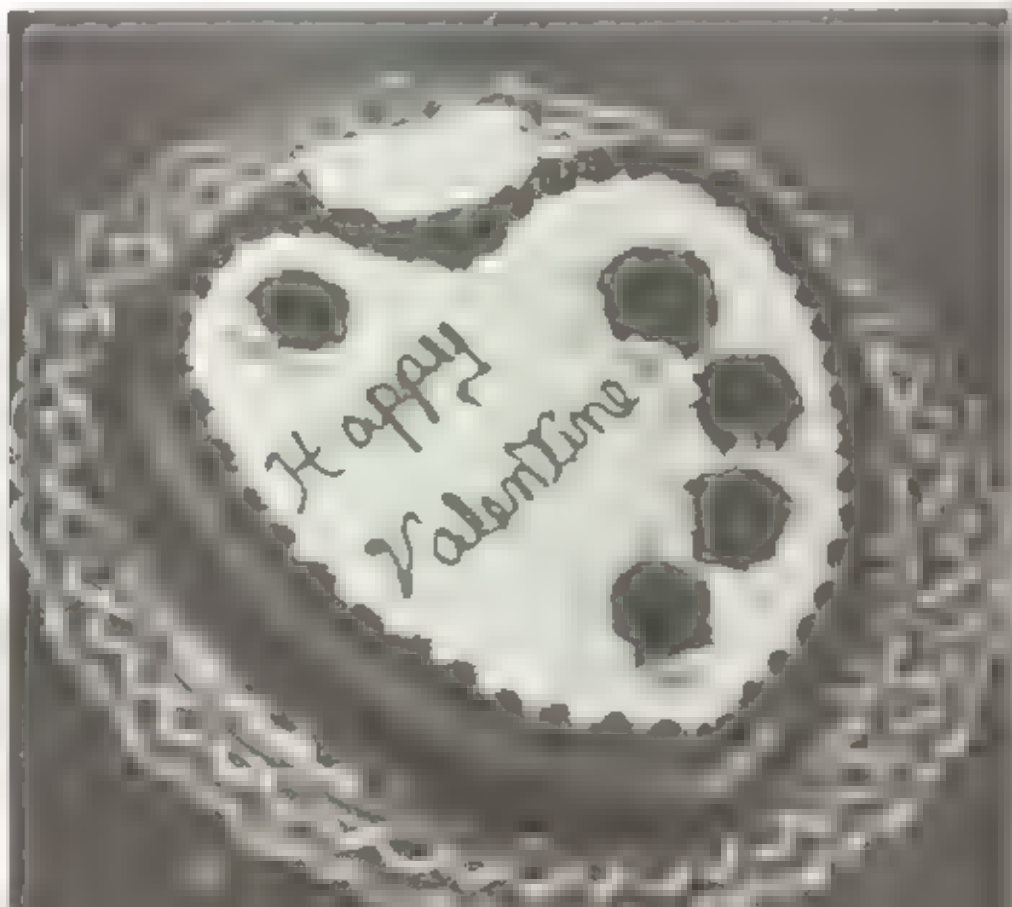

The emblem of the FHA shows that the future homes of America are in the hands of its youth. The radiating lines show this influence flowing out into other parts of the world.

"What am I doing here?" asks Steve Underwood as he realizes the FHA just wanted him to show off his clothes in the "Men's Fashion Show", not join the club.

DECA STUDENTS LEARN BUSINESS METHODS BY FIRST-HAND PRACTICE

DECA is a very inspiring organization for youth who are interested in careers in the business world. The students study marketing and distribution during their first year as DECA members. In the second and third years, the students are able to get jobs. Thus, they go to school in the morning and go to work in the afternoon. This gives the students ideas and open minds on what vocations they will choose for the future.

The students and their sponsor, Mr. John Oberlin, conduct a DECA meeting every other month at the Roanoker Cafeteria. After dinner, they are usually entertained by a guest speaker.

DECA started the year off with the Fall Rally at Northside High School. All the clubs in the Roanoke Valley attended, learned much, and returned full of enthusiasm.

William Byrd High School was the scene of the DECA District Contest. In the advertising event, Sharon Conner took second place. Judy Wheeler, representing Lewis in the job interview event, placed a proud third.

With the help of the Distributive Education program and the many businessmen involved, the students find out the complexity of our modern business world.

The FTA started the year with great enthusiasm and perseverance. Students in the club brought food once every month for an enjoyable pot luck supper at different students' houses. This year Debbie Bayse was elected as the state president of the FTA at the state convention at Richmond.

Teachers at Lewis are offered the assistance of the FTA members. The students help grade papers, run errands, and offer their valuable advice to teachers.

During the year, the FTA members set up a "Teacher of the Year" contest. All students are encouraged to vote for their favorite teacher at a penny a vote.

The Future Teachers of America Club provides a small start in helping fulfill the tremendous need for teachers in modern educational systems.

'To promote interest'. Those are the key words in the constitution of the Latin Club. To do this the Sodalitas Latina became one of the most active clubs in school. They started their activities before school began by sending their president, Steve Watkins, to New Orleans for the National Convention. In October, the girls of the club met the girls from the Cave Spring Latin Club in a memorable gridiron clash

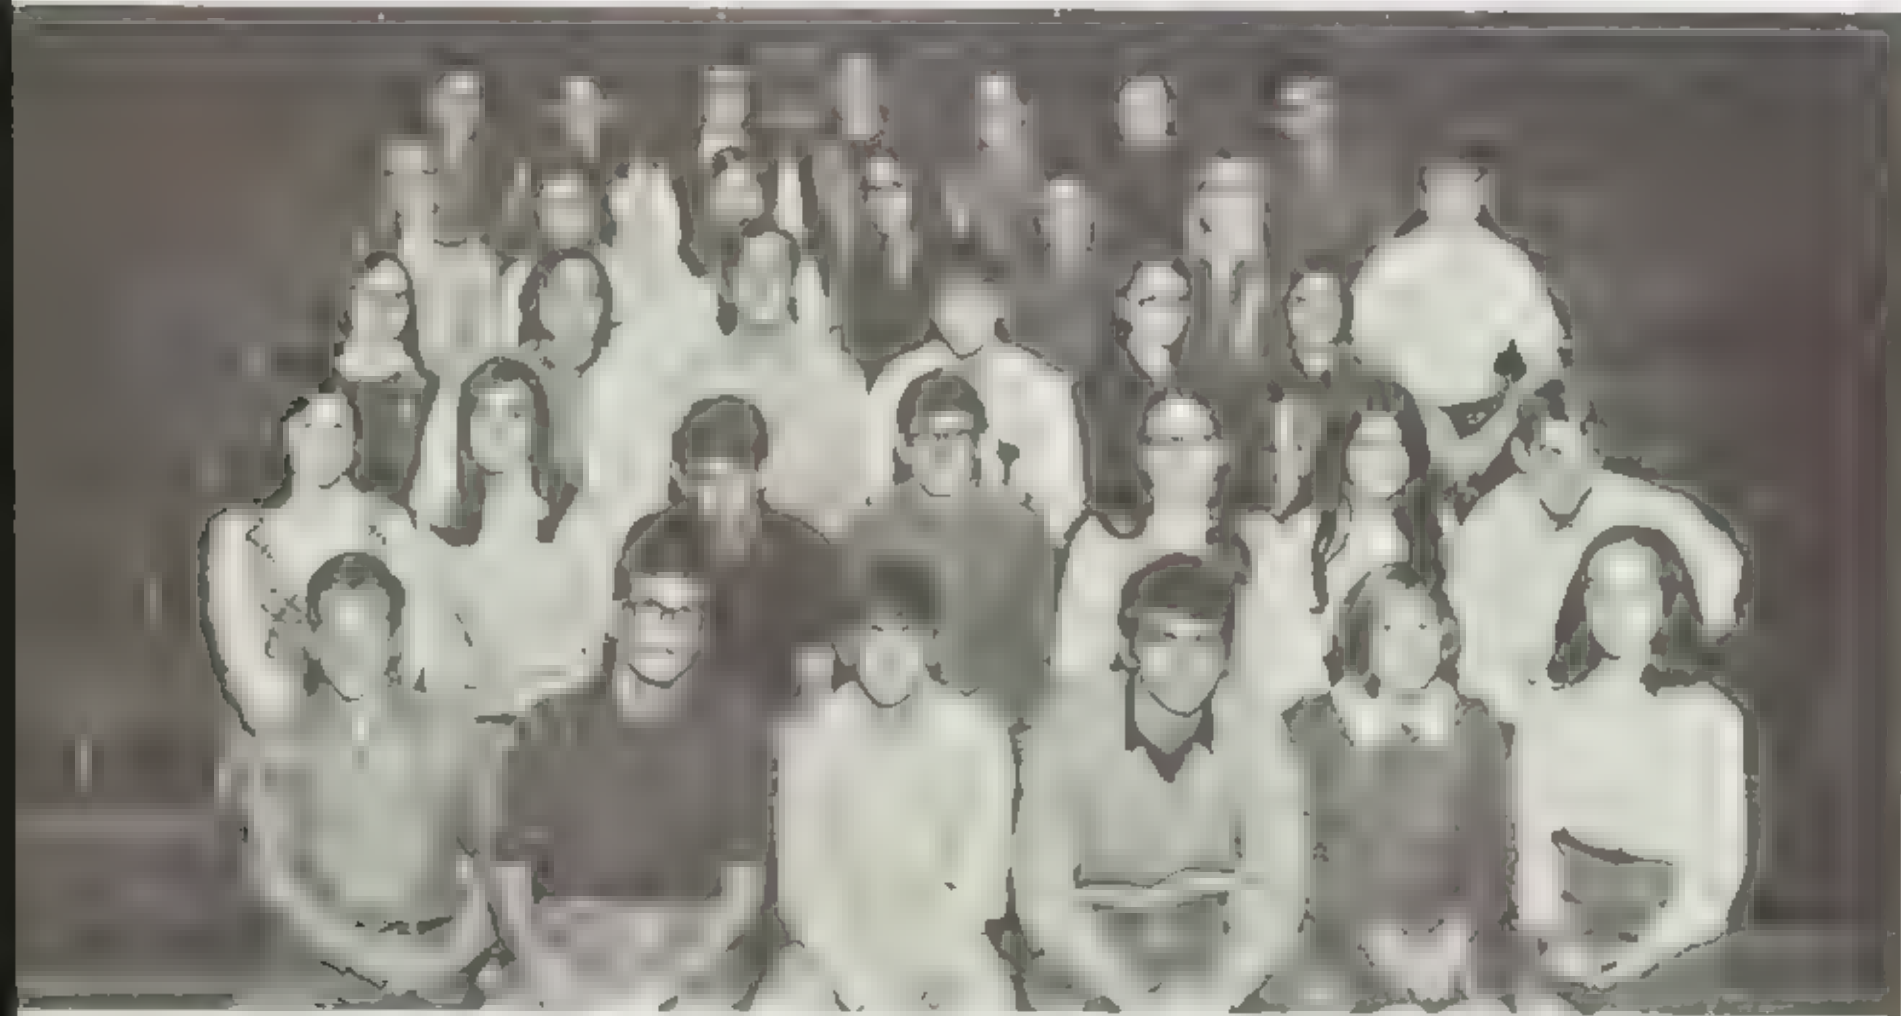

Winter marked a time of innovation for the Latin Club. They entered a float in the Roanoke Christmas Parade as Lewis' sole representative. Next, the men of the Sodalitas Latina demonstrated their basketball ability by rising to the challenge from their counterparts at Northside and Cave Spring. Over the spring break, Mrs. Aldridge and eight girls from the Latin Club accompanied the Annandale Latin Club on a pleasurable tour of Italy

This year was not without its one disappointment. For the first time in twenty-four years, the Latin Club was unable to present its annual Easter Pageant.

SPANISH CLUB PROBES HISPANIC CUSTOMS AND LANGUAGE

Hispanic customs and language have been deeply explored this year by the members of the Spanish Club. Guest speakers were asked to come and lecture on various Spanish countries. From these lectures the Club gained more knowledge of those countries and their people. One of the speakers asked was Maureen Clemo, our foreign exchange student at Lewis, who spoke on her native country Chile. Another way of expanding their knowledge was to practice the customs themselves. This was done at their annual Christmas Party, where Spanish food was served. For entertainment Christmas carols were sung in Spanish, and a pinata was set up and broken open. The Spanish fiesta held at the end of the year also showed a lot of the customs of Spain to many people. Using these methods the members have gained more knowledge and a better understanding of our hispanic neighbors.

KEEP VIRGINIA GREEN

KVG GIVES 25 YEARS OF FAITHFUL SERVICE TO VIRGINIA

For a quarter of a century the KVG's have been fighting forest fires in Virginia. These boys wear no insignia or uniform, yet they play a vital role in preserving one of our natural resources. They assist the Virginia Federal Foresters in helping to protect our forests. In the fall the KVG went on their annual field trip. They were taught how to use and maintain modern fire fighting equipment. With this new equipment they hope to perfect their methods of fire fighting, and that way better protect Virginia's forests.

BI-PHY-CHEM CLUB QUADRUPLES MEMBERSHIP

The Bi-Phy-Chem Club, associated with the Virginia Junior Academy of Science, went from near non-existence in 1969 to one of the most active school organizations on the scene '70. It was formed several years ago to promote student interest in science as a career and as a field of study, and anyone with an interest in science and a "C" average was eligible for membership.

The Physics Lab saw a lot of action every other Thursday afternoon when the fifty-six scientifically-minded members got together. The Project Committee invited guests to speak on such topics as "Drug Abuse", Speleology, and "The Threatened Ecology of Craig Creek". Club members also had the opportunity to go on interesting field trips including visits to Chatham Planetarium and Washington and Lee University. Putting their ability with a hammer to use, they went scavenging for rocks on Catawba Mountain one Sunday afternoon.

Constructively using their scientific knowledge, many Bi-Phy-Chem members entered the Roanoke County Science Fair, and a lucky few went on to the regional science fair in Richmond; a good way, participants agreed, to end the year's fun and learning as a member of the Bi-Phy-Chem Club.

LEWIS CHESS PLAYERS TASTE VICTORY IN INTER-SCHOOL MATCHES

The Chess Club of Andrew Lewis remained popular on the scene '70 for those having the imagination and ability to think of most moves before playing them. Along with participating to gain skill, the main objective of the Chess Club members was to obtain first place . . . champion of the board. One member would challenge another for a better position, and anyone in the top six could challenge the player presently number one. When the Lewis players met with other area schools, the first ten skillfully waged war and usually brought their enemy's king to a surrender. Checkmate!

Voices echoed in the halls as the choirs of 1969-1970 prepared to share their appreciation of great choral literature with their listeners.

The Eighth Grade Choir and the Ninth Grade Girls Choir, which serve as a training ground for the Chorale, sang in the Annual Christmas Concert and in the Spring Concert. Deep satisfaction and enjoyment was gained through the variety and quality of their music.

The Mixed Choir, consisting of more than eighty students from the tenth through twelfth grades, worked diligently in preparation for the various concerts given during the year. Their performance in the Christmas Concert was considered the highlight of the program. Most of the members of the Chorale came from the Mixed Choir, so a performance like that gave encouragement to many of the hopefuls. Under the direction of William G. Snyder, the Chorale attained its goal of perfection in many concerts given for civic organizations, churches, conventions, and school assemblies.

In May, the Chorale staged "Brigadoon", a musical set in the Scottish Highlands. After months of rehearsing for the show, the Chorale members were rewarded with thunderous applause and many curtain calls.

After a season of laryngitis, sore throats, aching feet, breath control, and tiring rehearsals, all the choir members still joyfully joined in the singing of the "Alma Mater" in the last assembly of the year.

"HIGHSTEPPERS INC."

STEP WITH RHYTHM

The Pride of Salem's Majorette Squad began their long year with many hard summer practices in preparations for band camp. At the band camp the talented girls developed their halftime routines into the finished product which were well received by enthusiastic Salemtes who noticed the new style of dance shown by the squad. This year the mighty majorettes really put on some terrific shows

A new feature the girls introduced during the year was a new uniform worn on game days. The uniforms were composed of a blue vest, a blue plaid skirt, a white blouse, and white socks. The new look was characteristic of the Highsteppers' togetherness and pride in the corps

The girls worked together with the pep band and performed during the basketball games, adding much spirit and color to the drab gym

Opus '70, the year's big musical production, provided the stage on which the Lewis Majorettes were able to exhibit their talents. This gave them the distinction of being one of the finest majorette units to represent Lewis in several years.

PRIDE OF SALEM PUTS DOWN HURRICANE CAMILLE

Band started for the officers early last June when they met their new director, Coach Reaser. "Doc," as he was sometimes called, became the guiding force which steered the group through the troubled waters of the long year. The rest of the band joined the officers in August for daily summer practice which was in preparation for band camp.

With tired lips and worn out feet the band left for camp. During the first part of camp, the unit learned most of the first football show, but then disaster struck. Hurricane Camille had decided to visit the very low river valley where the camp was located. Shortly before the evacuation of camp, a group of officers held a small ceremony in which they threw their "good" (?) luck STOP sign into the rising river. The usually calm river rose thirty feet and covered the practice field with eight feet of water.

The band returned from a very wet camp kind of damp and full of pride. It got into the swing of things immediately with the first ball game and continued throughout the whole season. The Pride of Salem received many compliments from viewers who realized the new style exhibited by the marching unit.

The crowning touch to a successful marching season was the trip to Bristol for competition among seventy bands from five states. The "Pride" received a "two" rating, very respectable for any band.

Of course no year would be complete without going to the Shrine Bowl. After returning from a football game at 2:00 AM, the band met downtown for the Shrine Bowl Parade beginning to 7:00 AM. The year '69-'70 was a bad year for weather and parades. The Christmas Parade was on the coldest day of the year; a searing four degrees above zero. An added attraction of that parade was two inches of snow. The band had to march hard to keep warm.

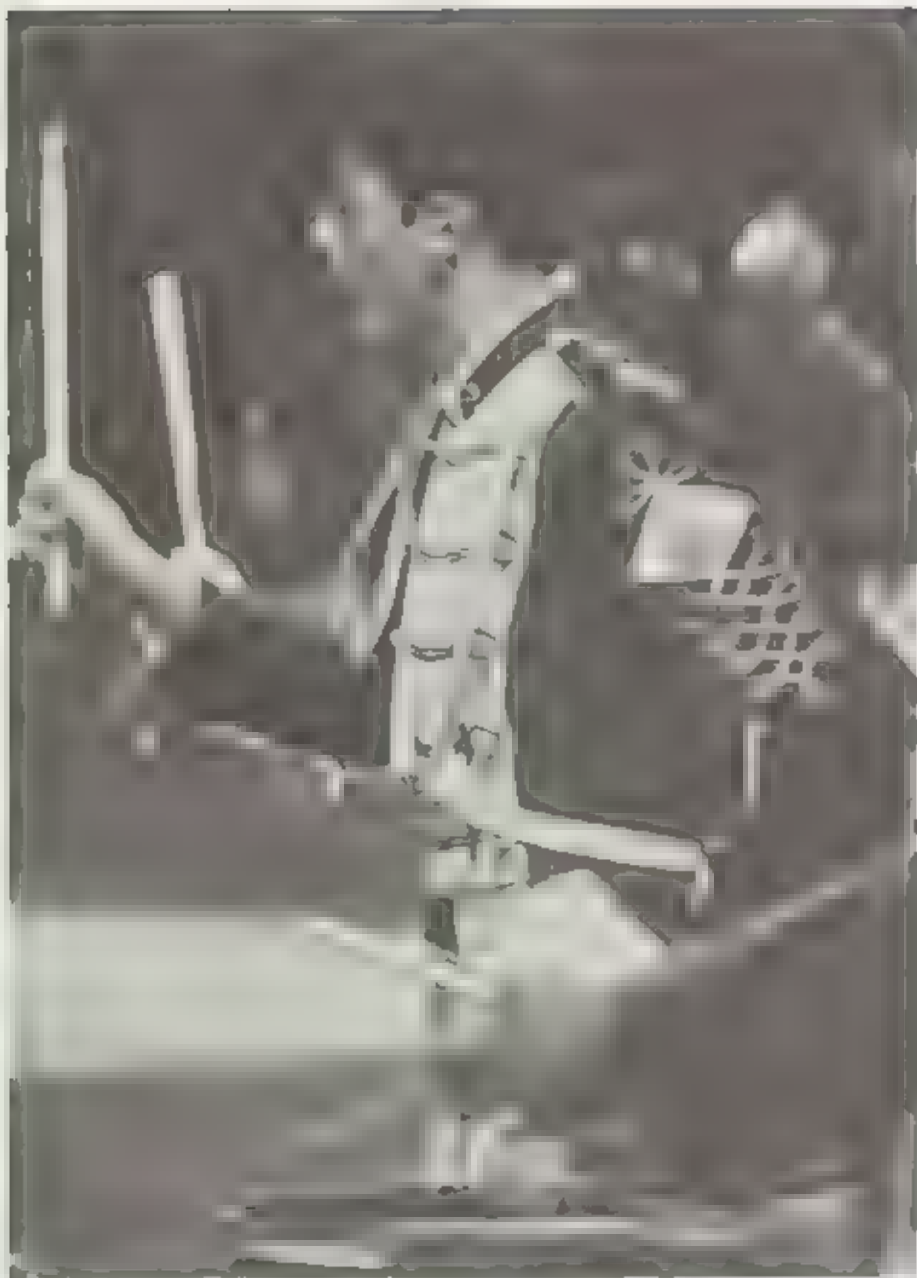

A concerned senior introduced the Lewis Pep Band during the '69-'70 basketball season to promote spirit for the school. This was the first regular Pep Band to be formed in the history of Andrew Lewis.

Opus '70, the showcase of the year, surpassed all standards expected of students. The band played to a packed full house and the crowd showed their approval by the roaring response and thunderous applause. The Band finished the year in the same way it entered it—with smiles on their faces, spirits high, and their sights fixed on the future.

WORK ON PIONEER PRODUCES VARIETY OF EMOTIONS

A new year of frustration, confusion, and hard work began for members of the Pioneer staff. "You kids have got to get out and sell those ads!" . . . "But just think, Sir! Andrew Lewis students will be your buyers of tomorrow, so please get at least a 1/4 page ad." . . . The first deadline approached—the confusion mounted for new and inexperienced staffers. . . . "This picture doesn't fit!" "You have to crop it, Stupid." "Crop it?" "You want me to stay at school until what time to finish my page?" "I'm not going to be on this staff next year!" The rest of the deadlines were taken a little more in stride, but of course, the inevitable frustration and punchiness still resulted. "I've got to have those pictures today, do you hear?" . . . "Who's going after our dinner tonight?" . . . "Will someone please help me think of a headline for this %!*&! page?" . . . "Will whoever borrowed the strobe please return it at your earliest convenience?" "You can't leave that part about Salisbury steak in your copy!" "That reminds me, I wish our dinner would hurry up!" The last section was sent to the publisher and the next two months were spent in nervous expectation as to how their pages would turn out. "Hey, this looks pretty good!" . . . "On second thought, maybe I will be on the staff next year!"

Even though many strange and funny events happened this year, the Spokesman Staff was able to get an edition of the Spokesman out every two weeks. Besides getting the regular editions out to the Andrew Lewis student body, the reliable newspaper staff was able to print a special edition of the Homecoming Court and a special edition during the Christmas week.

The first newspaper to appear on the scene caused many staffers to remain at school until two o'clock A.M. in order for the deadline to be met. Along with the problem of meeting deadlines, the staff was often locked out of their section of the once-infamous room 210. When this happened, the staffers elected someone to climb over the wooden divider and open the door.

The Spokesman Staff's annual Christmas party was held at the home of the sponsor, Mr. Porter. Among the gag gifts given to Mr. Porter was a green psychedelic commode which was erected in the middle of his living room. The commode was described by many as being very "flushy".

David Willard, is it true that you dropped all the newspapers before you could get out of the newspaper room?

Bill Patterson, Sally Spickard, and Tim Wiggington share one of the many jokes that liven the atmosphere of the newspaper room.

TURNTABLE MEMBERS TUNE STUDENTS IN ON SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Opening to the familiar theme song of "Sissy Strut", the words "Welcome to Wolverine Turntable" suddenly broke through and another exciting show began. Chosen by staff vote during the week, salutes went out to the outstanding student, athlete and teacher of the week.

During the show, students took over the main responsibility of filling the airtime with worthwhile material. They were taught professional techniques that enabled them to do everything from news and weather to station identification.

Acting as a public service broadcaster for all school activities, Turntable members announced all requested club and sports news. Other items making a regular appearance on the show included rating records, "wacky board," and college information for seniors.

Striving to improve their show, the staff worked extra hours to provide occasional live and taped interviews with school coaches, football and basketball players, and school officials on sports and student-interest issues.

After the sign-off, "Sissy Strut" was returned to its cover for another week, the mike went back to its rightful owners, and the Wolverine D.J.'s started preparing next week's show.

INKSLINGER

FALL AND SPRING ISSUES PUT PRESSURE ON STAFF

Lewis' blooming young writers could be found in the '70 scene among the by-products of originality, empty coke bottles and wadded up papers, industriously attempting to publish two literary magazines for the year.

The Inkslinger is Lewis' literary magazine, and gives students a chance to have their work published and read by others.

Many extra hours went into gathering material and meeting deadlines for the literary publication. At the height of their frustration, papers went flying out the windows, only making more work to gather them up and put them back in order.

Being members of S.J.P.A. entitled the Inkslinger staff to enter into competition on the local and regional level where they displayed their magazine and had it compared with those of other schools.

When in doubt, the staff can always look to Mr. Carl Colley who, as sponsor, is always around to lend a helping hand.

Closing the doors for another year, the staff looks forward to the next, hoping it will bring on even more new talent.

Creative thinking sometimes calls for unusual positions, according to Mary Agner, Tim Wington, Joe LaRocco, Ann Dickenson, Mike Eck, and Pat Gibbs

When one steps through the doors of Andrew Lewis, he is merely a potential adolescent. He is forced to adjust to the high-stepping activities of his peers. The magic moment bursts forth as one's eyes open to the numerous challenges and he begins to participate both mentally and physically. As one learns to accept defeat to appreciate winning and sharing happiness with others, a stable character and an individual is being formed. In the four most important years of a youth's life, he has extended his arms in every direction to grasp his identity, becoming a versatile human being. This young adult leaves the Andrew Lewis scene, but he always carries with him the ideals he formed and the goals that he achieved.

SOCIAL SCENE

HOMEcoming COURT MAKES NEW SCENE— ESCORTED BY FATHERS

Homecoming activities, in spite of a late start, came to a bubbling head on Halloween Day. Senior girls had been at a peak of anticipation for weeks awaiting the selection of the Homecoming Court. In an assembly two weeks before Homecoming, dreams became reality for thirteen senior girls when the Monogram Club, headed by Norman Watkins, made the long awaited announcement. When October 31 finally arrived, the day was charged with an air of unequalled excitement. The Homecoming Court was presented to the student body in an assembly. Dr. Fisher, the guest speaker, delivered a challenge to the football team and concluded the assembly by crowning Kathy Nunley Princess and Sid Carter Queen of Homecoming. An array of floats, decorated cars, cheerleaders, the band, and court composed the parade. Eight o'clock brought the kick-off as the Wolverines met their keyed-up opponents from Halifax. Rain slowed down the Wolverines only slightly, for they were still able to score 19 points in a well-played, hard-fought game. During halftime the band made their presentation to Lewis alumni, and a group of fathers, beaming with pride, presented their daughters members of the 1969 Homecoming Court to the public. Saturday night the Key club sponsored a dance and music provided by The Premiers added the final and romantic touch to a wonderful weekend.

THE SINGLE WING PROVES WINNER AS THE SENIORS SWEEP THE JUNIORS 14-0

Under the able leadership of tri-captains Linda Altizer, Donna Lancaster, and Mary Etta Halstead, the class of '70 edged by the Juniors 14-0. During the first half the "71"ers, captained by Jennifer Williams, carried the ball well. Only the determination of the Senior girls not to "drop another one" stopped them. The score at halftime was a hard-fought 0-0

The game got rougher in the second half when the more experienced Seniors started to show their stuff. Mary Etta Halsted scored six points in the middle of the third quarter to give the Seniors a 6-0 lead. Halsted tried to run for the extra two points but failed. Near the end of the fourth quarter the Seniors again scored after a tremendous drive by the Senior offense brought Donna Lancaster tearing across the goal line. Mary Etta Halsted ran for the extra points, this time succeeding and making the score 14-0. During the last few minutes the Juniors lost the ball on downs and the Seniors took over. The "Spirit of '70" ran the clock out leaving the Juniors scoreless and ending their football career with a fine 1-1 record

VARIETY IN THE SENIOR TALENT SHOW MAKES FOR A "NOW CHRISTMAS"

"A Now Christmas" was the theme of the Senior Talent show presented by the Class of '70. Witty Mike Elam and Leon Burcum were the masters of ceremonies. The diversity of personalities and individuals in the senior class was displayed through the variety of talent. Cheryl Morris gave an original speech titled "Love" and Carla Terry did a very lively dance number which won her the title "Junior Miss of the Roanoke Valley". Charlie Tuna and the Soul Fish provided the opening number of the show. Their performance was a "real splash". The senior class' Most Talented female, Glenda Strickland, sang "The Christmas Song" and "Who Am I", accompanied by Willie Bush. The Music Men Quartet made their appearance and sang an excerpt from "The Music Man". Backed by the AL Pep Band the majorettes danced to "Mission Impossible". Beckie Keeney then delighted the audience in a dance routine with Mr. Fodor to the song "Greensleeves". The last number consisted of the senior Varsity Cheerleaders, with a pep song version of their feelings as seniors.

To end the grand performance, the cast joined together on stage and led the audience of juniors and the remaining seniors in "Silent Night" and then proudly sang the school Alma Mater. The traditional show helped to leave a lasting memory of the Class of '70's presence.

SUNSHINE, LOLLIPOPS AND SWEETHEART COURT GO FORTH TO DANCE.

In March, with the presentation of the Andrew Lewis Sweetheart Court, Salem got an early preview of the beauty of spring. Planning for the Sweetheart Dance began before Christmas. Sixty jittery junior and senior girls, trying desperately not to bite the fingernails they had so carefully cultivated, went through all the drama of trying out in front of a panel of judges. Those selected were voted on by their classmates, and the results were announced on Wolverine Turntable. After several exhausting escapades in downtown Roanoke, the girls were able to reconcile their differences and agree on a dress. At the Sweetheart Court assembly all the fruits of their labor blossomed. The pastel stripes in the gowns served to complement the glow and smiles from their faces. All the loveliness of the court was summed up in Katherine Logan, as her father crowned her queen.

HOME GROWN "HAMS" ABSORB STAGE LORE

The Drama and Forensics Department charged into the new year challenged by the idea of setting up a new Forensics Department and a practically new Drama Department. Department head Miss Thomason and the English Department met this challenge head on, and in the process, turned out one of the swingiest departments of the year.

The Drama Department "stole the scene" by putting on a variety of plays ranging from the dramatic "A Street Car Named Desire" to the melodramatic "Bad Seed" and the Broadway comedy hit "Harvey".

The dramatists worked hard on the one-act play "Images", written by Miss Thomason, for the Western District One-Act Play Festival held in Martinsville. Their hard work paid off as they came trooping back to Salem bringing with them the honors they had won.

The Forensics Department also brought in their fair share of honors. Under the direction of Mrs. DeBell, Miss Moseley, Mrs. Kolmer, Mrs. Cutts and Mr. Robinson, the troupe led the competition in Public Speaking, Dramatic Reading, Poetry, Spelling, and Debate. Honors were taken in several of these categories in the Western District Forensics Meet at E.C. Glass in April.

By participating in these departments, students found many opportunities and modes for self-expression.

QUALITY INSTEAD OF QUANTITY WAS THE PHILOSOPHY OF THIS YEAR'S ASSEMBLIES

The Five Brass and Four Strings present their unique holiday with gusto

"May I have your attention please. Will the following rooms come to the New Gym." Not heard often enough in the opinion of most students, this sound was the best part of the week. The first to be honored with an assembly was football. The entire student body gave their support and encouragement to the team by following the examples of the spirited cheerleaders and noisy band. Late in the season Coach Joyce was crowned and the coaching staff honored as the best. Fall soon came, featuring the Homecoming Court in gala attire. Mr. Reaser helped set the mood with his talented piano playing, and Dr. Fisher crowned the queen. The Magazine Drive was launched, and each class presented a talented(?) skit to emphasize the importance of selling magazines. December came along, but Lewis was already in the Christmas spirit. The Christmas assembly featured the choir and the band performing holiday numbers, with the Five Brass and Four Strings finishing the musical segment of the program. As seasons changed, so did sports. The basketball team in their first assembly was presented with an impossible mission considering the officiating . . . to beat their mothers. The mothers lost, and a resulting problem was that the entire team went with dirty clothes for a month. The Sweetheart Court illuminated the drabness of late winter, reminding one of flowers and springtime. Mr. Logan sought out a single girl as his lady of beauty and crowned her queen. The honoring of students in athletic and academic achievements completed the assemblies of the year and provided a fitting time for the Seniors to leave for a new life.

WORLD UNDERSTANDING IS THE MAIN PURPOSE OF OUR SALEM AFS

The American Field Service's foreign exchange program, which is an international organization, sponsors students all over the world. The AFS has been at Andrew Lewis for the past eight years. The American Field Service has two programs; one is to send American students abroad and the other is to sponsor students in other countries on trips to this country. The purpose of the Exchange program is to bring students from all over the world together to study and exchange ideas.

This year Lewis hosted Maureen Clemo, a student from Concepcion, Chile, a modern city of small shops and markets. While in the United States, Maureen is staying with Sue Ellen Jolly and her family. Maureen already knew how to speak English when she arrived in the States, because in Chile they begin to study English in the second grade. She also knew a lot about America by talking to her brother and sister who had already been AFS exchange students in the United States.

Maureen addresses the student body on the similarities and differences of life in the U.S. and life in Chile.

Maureen Clemo and her host Sue Ellen Jolly enjoy operating language lab equipment.

From the panicked eighth-grader to the resigned senior, from the harried secretary to Mr. Hunt, from the wide-eyed student teacher to the hardened guidance counselor . . . all these made up that all-encompassing group, the scene-stealers of the seventies!

SCENE-STEALERS

THE PERILS OF A PRINCIPAL ARE OVERCOME BY OUR THREE COURAGEOUS ADMINISTRATORS

Three scene-stealers well-known to us all were Mr. Walter Hunt, Principal, and his cohorts in administration and fair play, Mr. Garland Life and Mr. Eddie Joyce, Assistant Principals. Plunging in where angels feared to tread, our leaders went about their duties faithfully. Whether completing a routine attendance check or confronting a major problem, they carried on with amazing endurance. Of course, there were hazards to be encountered. One of the greatest was policing the cafeteria. However, with heads held high and fear well-concealed, our trembling trio managed to maintain some semblance of order. And it must be noted that not once did they signal a retreat. This is the kind of courage that saw them through PTA meetings.

All kidding aside, these three must be given their due, and perhaps overdue, credit. With good intentions and few doubts, they saved the scene from chaos and catastrophe. Supervising activities, scheduling events, offering aid to everyone, Mr. Hunt, Mr. Life, and Mr. Joyce contributed their best and their all to help make the seventy scene the best ever.

Principal Mr. Walter Hunt checks his list of upcoming events and activities to be scheduled.

Lewis students who fearfully approach the office window daily for excuses, admittance slips, and passes are always glad to find Mr. Joyce there with a little "Life".

Mr. Farley wears his frequent "You've got to be kidding!" look as he glances over the last modular mix-up.

OUR DYNAMIC DUO CONTINUE THEIR CRUSADE FOR MODULAR SCHEDULING

Turning to two who were very much a part of the scene, we found its strongest backers: Mr. Farley and Mr. Kelly. Fending off opponents of modular scheduling, this fearless twosome brandished their well-used pencils and took refuge behind mountains of IBM cards. Here they made attempts to straighten out schedules beyond all hope and plotted new schemes. Occasionally they ventured out of their little castle (better-known to those in the scene-stealers' circle as the project office) to give pep talks to their recruits in the outside world. Whether preaching reformation in our own den of iniquity, the cafeteria, or reassuring disillusioned teachers, Mr. Farley and Mr. Kelly spoke with the dedication and conviction of true believers in their cause. Of course, all pioneers sometimes like to return to familiar homefronts—in our heroes' cases, the classroom. Delivering lectures to students with newly-awakened interests (Mr. Kelly on psychology and Mr. Farley on his beloved music) took them back to simpler days when life was not one big computer. However, these were only occasional relapses; our leaders continued to forge ahead. Back in the old drawing room they worked on their diabolical plans for battle, considering such tactics as installing a music system in the cafeteria to lull discontented minds. They took radical and much-needed measures, such as abolishing old-fashioned methods of torture like Stalag 210 and establishing the more humane 200. Another well-planned move was to create a new stage for 210 by creating office space for the newspaper and radio staffs and the SCA. With another year under their belts, our dynamic duo has proven that progress does lurk in the dark corners of Lewis and has cleared one path for improved education.

Eagerly awaiting his next unsuspecting victim, Mr. Kelly contemplates his opening remarks.

Miss Sayers, a former A.L. student, reviews her plans for the day as an A.L. teacher

FACULTY

THE TEACHER'S SCENE BEGINS WITH A RUSH AND ENDS IN RELIEF

As August rolled around last year, teachers began their annual preparation for resuming the eight-to-four grind five trying days a week. New additions to the faculty entered our hallowed halls eagerly, if a little fearfully; those of the more established set trailed in more slowly. With one year of modular scheduling under their belts, they knew a little better the confusion and near-panic which would be theirs to deal with during those first few weeks. Victims of elaborate instructions that told them nothing and piles of paperwork, teachers felt clouds of confusion descending on Lewis even before the students arrived.

Then the students did arrive . . . instant mayhem. Class time was spent trying to cut IA's down to a reasonable size, taking roll call in LD's, and attempting to discern which student went with what name. However, the A.L. teachers managed to present calm faces to the world (who knows what shrieking and pulling of hair went on behind the scenes?), and glimmers of organization began to come forth from dark corners.

Coasting along until the brief respite of Thanksgiving, the faculty suddenly became aware of the coming of Christmas and the end of the semester. Abandoning the spoon-feeding method, they began to bombard students with knowledge. Exams crept up two weeks after Christmas, and teachers were still three weeks behind. Cursing the snow which had cost them two workdays, they tried to cram three into one.

Embarking on the second semester, teachers prayed for smooth sailing and no more snow. They stuck it out until Easter and the end was finally in sight. A few more weeks of forcing information into uncooperative students, a whirlwind of finals and grading, and the end was here. PTA meetings, weekly faculty get-togethers, and hectic homerooms all a part of the teachers' seventy scene were left behind until next August.

FINAL YEAR BRINGS RELIEF TO TIRED SENIORS

Five years seems such a long time. That's more than a fourth of a teenager's life. Yet it was that long since the class of 1970 entered Andrew Lewis as spunky eighth graders. It seemed so large and scary to those fresh faces arriving from Broad Street, East Salem, and Oak Grove, but each year yielded new prestige and knowledge, as they grew, emotionally and physically.

High school life saw the beginning of more independence than had been known before. Now there were choices to make as to what to do with one's free time, which gradually became smaller and smaller. New courses offered a chance to learn foreign languages, or perhaps the finer aspects of industrial arts. Then too, surplus energy was given outlets in such things as athletics and clubs, which gave previously unknown insight into others' opinions and ideals. It was also at this time that they learned how to make engineering monstrosities called homecoming floats. Yes, things were fairly normal up to the eleventh grade.

At that time Andrew Lewis was remodeled into the "Mod" Andrew Lewis, much to the wonder of the returning junior class. Now there were new attractions at school, such as lost hallways and walls, and rooms that were split diagonally in half. After the initial shock was over, they became accustomed to Modular Scheduling, and school life gradually calmed down.

Now they could look forward to the junior-senior prom, which they knew would be the best ever. After much planning, work started a week before the big night was to come, and that afternoon the new gym was transformed into a pink Camelot, a very fitting way to end their eleventh-grade escapades.

Then they were seniors and faced one of the first decisions a person makes that determines his future life. The choices were unending as to occupational opportunities. By comparing likes and interests, one had to decide on an occupation, or what course of study to take in college. Andrew Lewis had given them a taste of many different subjects, and by choosing a favorite, many seniors laid plans for their occupations.

Lewis' MOST INTELLECTUAL seniors, Robyn Kinsey and Steve Watkins, spend a lot of their time in the library "studying"

Kitty Crush and Gary Manka "measure up" to their title of MOST LIKELY TO SUCCEED in the Lewis senior lineup

Neither of these two are out for blood. You can be sure that fighting is all in fun with MOST FRIENDLY seniors Gary McCormack and Becky Harshaw

One of Lewis' MOST SINCERE seniors, Nancy Turner, hopes that for once her male counterpart, Gary Farnsworth, won't live up to his title.

Leon Burtum and Karen Reynolds prove to be the WITTIEST seniors as they put one over on Mr. Joyce.

JUNIORS

JUNIORS SHOW THEIR COMPETITIVE SPIRITS DURING "SPIRIT WEEK"

With the first buzzer of the year, the race between classes had officially begun. All the classes of Andrew Lewis were in the running, emotions were at a peak, and all indications led one to believe that it would be one of the best races ever. The Juniors took an early lead by placing first in the Homecoming float competition. The race became tighter and tighter but in no time at all the Juniors came through again with first place in the magazine drive. Junior girls worked to perfect their tactics in the powderpuff game but fell prey to the bigger Senior girls. Taking even this defeat with chins up high, the Juniors worked even harder to make a comeback by "Putting It in the Bucket" for Spirit Week and walking off with first prize. Junior girls graced the Sweetheart Courts, while the Junior boys showed their authority on the basketball courts. The class of '71 set academic standards and took an active part in club activities. Even though the class of '71 worked hard, the able leaders worked harder, putting in many hours of hard labor to make their projects (in particular that exclusively Junior one, the prom) a list of smashing success stories.

The class of '72 certainly left their mark during their year as Andrew Lewis sophomores. For the second year in a row this industrious bunch proved themselves super-salesmen by grabbing the top honor in the magazine drive; however, despite headaches and hard work, '72's efforts went unrewarded in the Homecoming float competition. This set-back simply supplied the determination that won the Sophomore Hall second place in Spirit Week Competition. The class had been lacking a strong theme for the contest until finally, on the eve of the judging, somebody came through with the winning "Court-Martial the Colonels".

In athletic competition, the class of '72 supplied the backbone of the J.V. football and basketball teams, including many prospective varsity stars.

Full of potential and undaunted drive, the class of '72 should stay right on top in their years ahead at Lewis.

"LUCKY THREE" SEEMS TO DOMINATE FRESHMAN ACTIVITIES AT LEWIS

To ease their transition from the traditional scheduling into the Lewis program, freshmen students were the first to be scheduled into a series of orientation programs in addition to their regular summer orientation day.

Like classes before them, the class of '73 was eager to get into the mainstream of student life here at Lewis. Their first project was a float in the Homecoming parade. Unfortunately it placed third, meeting stiff competition from their experienced predecessors. In their efforts to gain recognition from other classes, the freshmen did not give up and were soon engaged in preparation for the upcoming magazine drive. Again they ranked third but resigned themselves to the fact that they must try harder next time. The freshmen were not satisfied with being number three, but in the annual Pep Club Membership Drive they repeated their previous exploits by again taking third place. Boasting the largest class, 393 students, this freshmen class can be expected to do big things in their future years at Lewis.

FIRST ROW: Carol Agee, Lloyd Aldridge, Paul Aliff, Debbie Altizer, Gary Anderson. SECOND ROW: Lee Anthony, Connie Ashburn, Vivian Austin, Steven Bailey, Susan Bailey. The eighth-grade class at Lewis has always labored under handicaps. Not only do they have the smallest number of people, but also they are even lower in rank than the freshmen. Another drawback is the lack of elected leaders until half the year is over. Usually overlooked (literally) by upperclassmen, the eighth-graders this year decided to at least make a showing. Faced with modular scheduling for the first time, they struggled with complex schedules as well as the most sophisticated senior. However, since most of their gain time was scheduled, they had few chances to test newly-found wings. Their most important contribution was decorating a hall for Spirit Week, a feat rarely, if ever, accomplished by our youngest class. They also contributed their efforts and time toward the magazine drive. Off to a good start, the eighth-grade class has set the stage for their scene in the years to come.

EIGHTH GRADE OFFICERS: Karen Kessler, treasurer; Theresa Woodall, vice president; Mr. Richard Thomas, sponsor; Steve Barnhart, president; Lisa Shaw, secretary.

SERVICE CREWS AT LEWIS DO THEIR PART

PARAPROFESSIONALS—Mrs. Elfriede Harmon, Mrs. Anne Whitlow, Miss Ginny Brubeck, Mrs. Bonnie Blomberg, Mr. Titus Rohrbaugh.

Very much a part of the scene, the service groups of Andrew Lewis did their part to help keep it running smoothly. While the paraprofessionals aided the teachers in keeping an eye on students, the secretaries kept watch over the front offices. The cafeteria workers prepared meals for 1400 hard-to-please students, and the maintenance men kept Andrew Lewis in good running order in spite of the efforts of some students. While the chemistry lab assistants tried to prevent the overly-experimental from over-experimenting, the assistants down in the gym attempted to corral groups of active girls. The stage crew provided effects for the drama department, and the sound crew took care of A.L.'s complicated equipment. The students often seen in the office performed various duties, and the library assistants helped everyone benefit from the IMC. Whether in direct contact with students or working more or less behind the scenes, these often-unappreciated crews made their undeniable contributions to A.L.'s seventy scenes.

The focus of scene '70 shifted many times from local to state to national issues, sometimes involving all three simultaneously, but emphatically boasting some real never-before's.

HABITAT

EFFECTS OF LOCAL ISSUES FELT STRONGLY BY AREA RESIDENTS

Looking back over the late '69 and early '70 scene in the Roanoke-Salem community, certain highlights of the year come into focus. The strike at the General Electric plant, which seemed to drag on and on but finally saw a settlement, brings to mind the picket signs and overcoats seen at each of the plant's gates. Political issues made their impact on the scene: consolidation and liquor-by-the-drink were argued on all corners. The outcome? Consolidation was defeated, which resulted in the reopening of annexation suits in court. Liquor-by-the-drink made its debut in Roanoke and Roanoke County, but it failed to pass in the Salem referendum. One of the valley's sons, Linwood Holton, ran as the Republican candidate in the Virginia gubernatorial election. One local Holton rally was particularly successful; President Richard Nixon made a campaign appearance at the Civic Center to speak in Holton's behalf. When the returns of this hotly contested election came in, it appeared the President had backed a winner, our area could now boast being hometown not just to a new governor, but to the Old Dominion's first Republican governor of this century.

A national issue brought to the local level, the drug scene came sharply into focus as a serious problem in the Roanoke-Salem area. As the result of rumor-investigation, some shocking facts were uncovered, and large-scale efforts by concerned citizens went into the education of young people against the dangers of drug abuse.

The city of Salem saw in '70, for the first time, the proposed plans for a main street face-lifting designed to attract more business to the downtown area. Also new in '70 and unique to the Salem area was a program sponsored by the police department that allowed local young men who wished to participate to go on patrol with trained officers and assist them in a limited capacity with their duties. When the fairly new Civic Center's roof developed a bad leak, quite a controversy developed over who was responsible for it, but the opening of a thoroughly modern city library was heralded by all Salem residents.

Sports events also made local headlines. The Salem Rebels continued to put on fine exhibitions of ice hockey. Roanoke's Buckskin football team finished out an exciting first season at Victory Stadium, and fans attended their last annual Harvest Bowl football game this year, marking the end of a long-standing sports tradition in the Valley. In basketball, the Roanoke College Maroons took the championship in the Mason Dixon tournament at the Civic Center.

In a thriving area such as the Salem-Roanoke Valley, it is not surprising to find a variety of local issues under discussion at any one time. The year '69-'70 certainly enjoyed its share of controversy and accomplishments.

President Richard Nixon lends his support to a local gubernatorial candidate, Linwood Holton, at a campaign rally at the Salem-Roanoke Valley Civic Center.

The new Salem Public Library was a relief to city residents who could no longer use the county resources without a stiff charge

Part of the training Lewis student John Clark received while working under the Police Department's youth program included instructions in handling the riot equipment he is wearing

The Salem Fire Department makes certain its members are thoroughly trained. Here, an old house was purposely burned to give rookies the first hand experience needed for saving lives and property with the least possible in injury to themselves.

GUBERNATORIAL ELECTIONS, NEW LEGISLATION HIGHLIGHT HEADLINES IN VIRGINIA

It is a common assumption that there is a little "ham" in every politician, and perhaps more fact than fiction lies within it. At least in Virginia, our leading politician, Governor Linwood Holton, certainly stole the scene. Mr. Holton took part in a strenuous campaign that went right down to the wire, and among his campaigners was one Mr. Nixon, who won a pretty important election himself a couple of years back. After coming out on top in the fall elections, Governor Holton held the reins in his hands as Virginia high-stepped into the seventy scene.

The General Assembly made the scene in Richmond this year and immediately fell to work. One of the first and most important issues was naturally the budget. Higher taxes on liquor, gas, and cigarettes (all highly explosive issues) were possible sources for increased revenue. Other issues at hand were lowering the voting age to 18 and liberalizing the state's abortion laws.

Virginia is known as a slow-moving state but problems are handled, if slowly, at least steadily. The high rate of traffic accidents and the poor conditions for the mentally ill (for which a bond issue was passed) are only two of the problems which have been recognized. Teachers and education, doctors and medicine, Negroes and their plight, have all merited attention. However, Virginia did not go in for competition for headline space and appeared to prefer to watch the turmoil in other states from a safe distance . . . perhaps all the snow and unusually cold weather had something to do with it.

Senators Edmund Muskie of Maine and William Spring of Virginia are guests of honor at a Virginia Democratic fund-raising dinner held in Roanoke, Virginia.

WORLD ANXIOUSLY AWAITS OUTCOME OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL EVENTS

It is necessary to expand the term "scene" beyond local and state limits not only because studies involve students with issues, but because as citizens every national and international event affects, or will affect, their lives in some way. All the events of 1969-70 could not possibly be covered, but an attempt at brief coverage has been made to record those issues and events that were prevalent in the minds of a large percentage of the '70 scene's population

In the Middle East, Israel and the Arab nations refused to accept any proposed settlements of their differences and kept pounding away at each other. Arab terrorist groups extended their activities to include bombings of planes of other nations bound for Israel. Israel proclaimed she would continue to "stem Arab aggression" alone if necessary, and backed up her statement with what some experts believed to be the best Air Force the world has ever seen

In Africa, Nigeria finally subdued Biafra after 32 months of bitter fighting. The world watched anxiously as former Biafrans were rescued from starvation, although an entire generation had already been lost

Southeast Asia continued to be a festering trouble spot in '70 and stood on the brink of a new crisis in Laos. Would the United States or would it not be compelled to rescue Laos from communist take-over? The Viet Nam situation changed slightly with organized U. S. troop pullouts and an increased "Vietnamization" of South Vietnamese forces, but the fighting droned on with deadly consistency

On the national scene in Washington, D.C., President Richard Nixon wound up his first year in office still faced with many of the country's chronic problems, but the nation had, however, seen some significant changes in its official priorities. Almost simultaneously with the adoption of the lottery system of involuntary military service to replace the selective service draft, President Nixon, in a nationally televised speech, presented a monumental change in foreign policy—an official commitment to the withdrawal of United States troops from Viet Nam. But domestic policy was also due for a change; scores of prophesizing ecologists had for years foretold the imminent doom of this nation should environmental pollution continue unchecked, and the American public and government finally opened their eyes and noses to the problem.

Throughout the year, specific events provided front page headlines for weeks at a time as the nation followed their progress. Following the press' handling of the President's speech, Vice President Spiro Agnew delivered a blasting speech at the news media's treatment of the Nixon Administration, which some felt to be a threat to free speech and others believed was long overdue. The nation saw its first Moratorium Day—intended to be a vast antiwar demonstration, but in reality it became an opportunity for all Americans to do some serious thinking about their positions on the war. Abe Fortas resigned from the Supreme Court under pressure after engaging in questionable financial activity. The first Presidential appointee to fill the vacancy left by Fortas, Clement Haynsworth, was rejected by the Senate, and a second appointee, G. Harold Carswell, also failed to get the two-thirds vote for approval. A federal court order requiring immediate total integration of all public school systems raised the question of the constitutionality of busing students to other school districts to achieve racial balance.

Not all headlines proclaimed dividing issues, however. For one brief span of time, the country, and perhaps the world, seemed united in the hope that the crew of the Apollo 11 and later of Apollo 12 would return home safely from their moon missions and in the hope that if man's intelligence could get him to the moon and back, perhaps he could achieve world peace.

'One small step for a man, one giant step for mankind.' This famous quotation will go down in history as spoken by Neil Armstrong as he made the first step onto the moon's surface.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE BOOKS

was, for staff members, the climax of endless afternoons after school, the frustrations of having what they thought were completed pages returned to be redone, and of course, those long nights before deadlines. Their only real reward came when the book was finally in their hands, and they could eagerly thumb through it to find "their" pages, although here shall be added a much-understated, "Thank you."

Others also need to be recognized: Mr. Gibson, for his patient Saturday-afternoon proofreadings and all the times he pleaded our cause to the company when we ran into trouble; Mrs. Hazel K. Barger for getting our photographers that valuable press pass when President Nixon visited the Civic Center; Hidden Valley for the use of their ballroom; Mr. Paul Apruzzese for his assistance in stocking our darkroom; Kyle Prufer for "service above and beyond the call of duty"; Mrs. DeBell for her assistance as Co-Sponsor and excellent job in handling a real problem, the Index. Last but not least, thanks to Mrs. Bowman, our sponsor, who was with us through all the deadlines and disasters in addition to a teacher's normal work load.

Our '70 scene had to come to a close, but the promising new decade it began has nine more years to go. What will these years be like? We can only guess . . . and hope. Many of the experiences we faced this year will be faced again by those that follow us—hunting down classes those first few Freshmen weeks, using the day's schedule, cramming for exams, and the anxious days before grades come out. For most of us, the new decade holds the prospect of college, jobs, marriage, the military, or some combination of these. Whatever the new decade holds, one thing is certain—the end of the Seventy Scene is just a beginning.
